MADOC TO HAVE NEW BRASS BAND

On Monday night, September 7th, a meeting was held in the Public Library for the purpose of discussing the organization of a new Brass Band in Madoc. There is a nucleus of bandmen in the district and it is gratifying to find that so many residents are interested in promoting a band.

Some of the Bandmen have already been together for a musical session but the first official rehearsal will be held in the High School next Tuesday night at 8 p.m. Prospective Bandmen and others interested are invited to attend this rehearsal and it is hoped that the younger men and boys will avail themselves of the opportunities which will be extended.

Two instruments were presented to the band by Mrs. Mary Barton for which the band is very grateful. These instruments have already been allocated to players and it is hoped this fine gesture will be repeated by others in the community.

MADOC JUNIORS TO MEET EMPIRE

The Madoc Juniors Softball team are in the Ontario Amateur Softball Junior C semi-finals and will meet Empire in the best of three series. The Madoc boys recently defeated Hastings in two straight games, winning the final 22-7.

The first game of the semi-finals will be played at Empire next Saturday night with the second game in Tweed on Saturday night, September 20th. Empire is situated near Hamilton.

The team is under heavy expense in travelling so far and any donations will be greatly appreciated. A bus has been engaged for the trip and there are a number of vacant seats. Anyone wishes to go with the team may purchase a bus ticket at Devolin's Grocery.

NEW KIWANIS CLUB FORMED IN TWEED

A new Kiwanis Club has recently been organized in Tweed with thirty Tweed business men as Charter members. The Tweed Club was sponsored by the Madoc Club and an organization meeting was held on Thursday, August 28th with 15 members of the Madoc Club along with Lt. Gov. Bert Coulter, of Oshawa, and International Representative Mel Osborne, of Toronto, in attendance.

The president of the Tweed Club is Roy Woolfrey, Secretary, Jim Scott and Treasurer, Tommy Thompson.

The Charter will be presented to the Tweed Club at a large Kiwanis gathering to be held in Tweed the fourth week in October.

BAPTISMAL SERVICE HELD AT KELLAR'S BRIDGE

A very impressive Baptismal Service was held on Sunday afternoon at Kellar's Bridge, when six candidates from the Pentecostal Assembly, Banbrookburn, followed the Lord in water Baptism, on their profession of faith, each one testifying to a "Born Again" experience.

The weather was ideal and a large crowd was in attendance. Rev. Laurie Price, Belleville, was in charge, assisted by Pastor Rodger. Rev. Price brought a short message on "Baptism", pointing out the Scriptural truth of immersion and most important of all, the fact that it was a command of the Lord.

WEDDINGS

BRISTOL—WRAY

Tall, white standards of large, white mums, ferns and white gladioli blooms formed the setting on Wednesday, September 3, in Bridge St. United Church, Belleville, at 2.30 p.m. for the marriage of Marilyn Beverley Wray, of Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harley Wray to Charles William Bristol, of Belleville, son of Mrs. R. F. Bristol, Madoc, and the late Mr. Bristol. The Rev. Duncan McTavish, pastor of the church, officiated in the double-ring ceremony.

Mr. Alec Gordon, church organist, rendered the wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. W. J. Burgoyne, of Belleville, who sang "The Lord's Prayer", before the ceremony and "Through the Years", during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of snowdrop white French lace over satin. The strapless bodice featured a soft cuff at the top and the graceful skirt fell in soft folds from the corded waistline. The lace redingote was fashioned with small rounded collar and buttoned to the waist, falling away into a graceful sweep at the back. The sheath-like sleeves ended in lily-points over the wrists. A Juliet cap of matching lace and satin held her fingertip veil of tulle illusion and she carried a cascade bouquet of white gladioli flowers and stephanotis.

Miss Katharine Mills, of Belleville, was maid of honor, and Miss Claire Barry, of Mimico, Ontario, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid. Both wore identical strapless gowns of shrimp nylon marquisette over shrimp taffeta with matching net jackets, mitts and caps, and carried nosegays of creamy white mums.

Mr. John Bristol, of Madoc, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman, and the ushers, were Mr. Eric Bristol, of Belleville, cousin of the bridegroom, and Mr. Kenneth Broad, of Madoc.

The reception was held in the garden at the summer home of the bride's parents, at Peat's Point where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a gown of Mediterranean blue chiffon with matching accessories and corsage of Rubrum lilies. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, wearing a grey crepe gown with accents of lace, with matching accessories and mauve orchid corsage.

For travelling to points west, the bride chose a grey flannel suit with white and red accessories and corsage of white carnations. Mr. and Mrs. Bristol will reside on Trent Road upon their return.

Out-of-town guests were present from Ottawa, Toronto, Trenton, Madoc, Whitby and Rochester, N.Y.

Prior to her marriage, the bride-to-be was entertained at several showers given in her honor; a kitchen shower at the home of Miss Katharine Mills; a miscellaneous shower by the cottagers at Peat's Point, at the home of Mrs. J. E. Marsh; a crystal shower at the home of Mrs. Wilfrid L. porte, and a china shower by Mrs. D. Stanton, Mrs. C. Miller and Mrs. G. Brearley, as co-hostesses.

Craftsmanship!

Craftsmanship, says the historian, is the fruit of traditional skills. For centuries, Britain has been a sanctuary for the oppressed peoples of Europe. Religious and racial persecutions and economic duress have driven thousands of skilled craftsmen to these islands—carpet-weavers, potters, glass-blowers, wood-workers, clock-makers, jewelers, tailors, silk-smiths, goldsmiths and silver-smiths, bakers, candlestick-makers, and their know-how, their manipulative dexterity and aesthetic sensibility has become part of our own tradition.

But what is this craftsmanship? Is it the thumb-marks on a throw vase, the dents of the hammer in beaten silverware, the marks of the chisel on wood, the file on steel, the paintbrush on china? Can it be that the hand, as a tool or as a chuck to hold a tool, has some mysterious advantage over the machine? Is there a harmony between the material and the form and the purpose of an article made by hand that is beyond the power of the machine to imitate?

I was born within a china stone's throw of the site of the Churchyard works where Wedgwood began his career; I grew up among the marlbanks and shraff-tips of the Potteries; I lectured for some years at the Wedgwood Institute and studied at the Wedgwood Museum; and like all 'potters' I became intensely proud of the pottery industry and its greatest figure. Yet if I had to assess Wedgwood's genius solely on the strength of his ornamental wares I should not put it very much higher than that of Bernard Palissy or Bernard Moore.

For me, Wedgwood's true greatness rests with his so-called 'Useful Wares,' the table services in 'Cream Colour' or 'Queen's Ware.' These wares, many of them designed and modelled by the master himself, exhibited all the true properties of clay: they were the work of an original craftsman in complete control of his material, an artist content to allow beauty to grow from

Durable Linen Towels a Wise Investment

BY EDNA MILES

ONE of the best buys a housewife can get for her money these days is the low-count, coarse-weave linen dish towel. The reasons for this are many but one of the foremost is the greater absorbency of the linen towel. It thus takes fewer towels to stock a linen cabinet.

Absorbency is, of course, a primary factor in any towel. But there are other sound reasons for investing a portion of your household money in linen. Linen was widely used for bandages before the advent of sterilization because it is a poor breeding ground for germs. This is highly essential in hygienic dish-drying.

It's easy to launder, because it requires no bleach and becomes softer and whiter with age. And linen towels give a high polish to glassware because they are nearly free from lint of any kind. The trick in getting a high gleam in glassware is to polish each piece with a dry towel after it has been thoroughly dried.

Other linen products, such as place mats and napkins, shown in picture at left, launder and iron easily. They are durable and colorful, appearing in decorator colors of green, chartreuse, coral, brown, turquoise, cloud pink, sky blue and maize for mixing or matching. These perfect backgrounds for your china and silver are finished with hem-stitching and a fringe.

While the linen product costs slightly more than other types, it's an economical, long-range purchase because of its great durability.

the perfect solution to a practical problem and his own unconscious aesthetic sensibility. They were 'extremely simple, neat, convenient and durable and they became the prototypes of the finest practical wares made by potters throughout the world.

Many of Josiah's shapes and patterns are still in production at Barlaston; and they are still best sellers. Under the direction of Josiah's great-grandson (another Josiah Wedgwood) the great tradition has been strengthened and enriched. The new shapes and patterns emerging from the Barlaston studios match the 'Useful Wares' for workmanship, usefulness and felicitous line and pattern. There can be no higher praise.—From "The Craftsmen."

about thirty minutes. Serve with cream, hard sauce or ice cream. Yield: five servings.

PLUM KUCHEN

1 package hot roll mix
1 quart halved plums
1/2 cup or more sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 egg yolks
1/2 cup cream

(1) Prepare dough from hot roll mix as directed on package and let rise till double in bulk.
(2) Roll to fit a greased deep 7 x 12-inch pan. Place in pan, grease surface and let rise till almost double in thickness.

(3) Arrange plums in parallel rows on dough. Mix sugar and cinnamon and sprinkle over dough.
(4) Mix egg yolks with cream and drip over plums.

(5) Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) about twenty minutes. Yield, eight servings.

Apple or Peach Kuchen:
Substitute apples or peaches for plums in the above recipe.

The "Royal" Game

Chess is an exceedingly old game. No one knows how old, but it appears to have been played in Hindustan in remote times, and was probably taken from there to Persia where the Arabs acquired a knowledge of it. The Arabs then introduced the game into Spain in the eighth century. Thence it spread into all Europe.

The main piece of the game is the king. The Arabs, taking the name of this piece from the Persians, called it shah, and when the king had been maneuvered by an opposing player into a position from which it could not be extricated, thus ending the game, they said, "Shah mat" (The king is dead). In Old Spanish this became saque mate; in Old French escheq mat, and this in turn produced the Middle English chess mate, coming down to us as check-mate. And when a player notified his opponent that his king was exposed, the Arabian shah, through the same process, became the English check. (All other uses of our word check, and of the British cheque have been extensions of this original sense.)

When the game had reached France it became known by the Old French name, esches, a plural of escheq. And when this syllable was dropped, like many other similar words of French origin. Thus was produced the name by which we know the game, chess. So, if we go back to original sources, "chess" is another word for "kings."

The game of checkers (British chequers) was originally a modification of chess, and its name came from the same source. (In England the game is preferably known as "draughts.") And the Court of Exchequer, an English department of government connected with the public revenue, is believed to have taken its name in the twelfth century from the square table which was laid out into square spaces, like that of a chessboard, for convenience in making calculations in the system of accountancy then in use.—From "Thereby Hangs A Tale," by Charles Earle Funk.

1 Kings 1:38-40; 3:5-9; 8:27-30

Memory Verse: Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths. — Proverbs 3:5-6

Solomon was the first king's son to ascend the throne of Israel. Absalom and Adonijah, other sons of David had sought to secure the throne but were foiled in their attempts. Solomon was Bathsheba's son. His humble request for understanding to serve the better was abundantly answered. None to this day, save our Lord Jesus Christ, has equalled him in this quality. The people saw "that the wisdom of God was in him, to do judgment."

The building of the temple was Solomon's most important achievement. It took seven years. He made a treaty with Hiram, king of Tyre, supplying him with food in return for skilled workmen and timber from Lebanon. The timber was taken to the sea and floated down in rafts. Stones, which were made ready at the quarry, and some of which were very large, were so exactly measured and cut for their places in the structure that no hammer nor axe was needed or used when they were assembled. The dedication of the temple was held in connection with the feast of Tabernacles after the ark of the covenant had been brought into the most holy place. Solomon knelt before the great altar of burnt offering and spread forth his hands to heaven and, in the presence of a vast throng, offered a lengthy prayer of dedication which was well worthy of the occasion. Then, rising from his knees he stood and blessed all the assembly of Israel with a loud voice. The service was concluded with the offering of a vast number of sacrifices. This event inaugurated a new era in the history of the Jewish church and state.

The memory section contains a great promise. At every age we tremulously approach great decisions. Here we are assured of Divine direction if we acknowledge the Lord in all our ways.

CONFIDENCE

The crusty president of a country bank suddenly decided to be candid on his eightieth birthday when somebody asked him, "How did you get started in the banking business anyway?"

"Wasn't nothing to it," confessed the old moneybags. "I just hung out a sign sayin' 'Bank. First thing you know, a feller comes along and deposits $100. A little later, another comes along and deposits $200. By that time I was so confident I put in ten dollars of my own money."

AWFUL THOUGHT

Two elderly ladies checked into a sporty new hotel in Miami Beach. The first thing they noticed was a furry little man circulating from guest to guest in the lobby, whispering, and collecting money. They were told he was a bookie—a man who took bets on the horses.

In vacation abandon, they decided impulsively to risk two dollars themselves. They lost. That night one of the ladies tossed around in her bed and sighed so lugubriously that the other counseled her, "Becky, you shouldn't cry so over spilled milk. Stop worrying because you lost. It was only two dollars." "It ain't losing I'm worrying about," Becky answered. "I was worrying about if we had won. What would we have done with the horse?"

THE FARM FRONT

by John Russell

Ontario hog marketing agency is about ready to function, W.G. Johnson, secretary of Ontario hog producers association, told members in a recent report.

Mr. Johnson said, "representatives attending the hog producers meeting last March passed a motion instructing Ontario hog producers association to set up a 'central marketing agency' whereby hogs produced in Ontario and covered by the scheme would be marketed."

"Your executive and board has, since that time, continually endeavored to implement and construct basis for such an agency. This involved considerable detail work such as the securing of suitable personnel capable of handling such a large enterprise, after which agreements acceptable to both parties had to be outlined.

"We are in a position to advise producers that the commission firms (who have been operating on the Ontario stockyards) have formed a company to be known as the United Livestock Sales Limited for the purpose of marketing hogs under the appointment of the Ontario hog producers' marketing board.

An agreement has been reached with this company whereby they will act as the central marketing agency.

This agreement will be signed by the principals concerned as soon as some return from holidays. "Clauses contained in the agreement are:

1. All hogs to be sold for the best possible price the law of supply and demand will allow.
2. The producer to receive full "statement of settlement" includ-

About Saluting

After the defeat of the Spanish Armada in 1588 a naval tournament was arranged for the victorious British seamen. At the request of Sir Francis Drake, Queen Elizabeth the First consented to come down from London and award the prizes.

This caused some embarrassment among her counsellors, as it would mean bringing ornate seamen face to face with Her Majesty—an awkward precedent.

The officer in charge of the arrangements proved himself equal to the occasion. He issued orders that "on account of the dazzling loveliness of Her Majesty, all seamen, upon receiving their prize, should shield their eyes with their right hand."

Only for Slaves

Thus was born the modern form of military and naval salute. To this day the naval salute is unique in that the hand is held horizontally over the eye instead of the vertical position used by the other Services.

A form of salute with an even older history is the "Roman salute" of the outstretched arm, which was adopted by the German and Italian services during the last war. This was used at the suggestion of the Italian poet, D'Annunzio, who discovered the salute on some statue of ancient Rome.

It seems that he did not realize the significance of the gesture, because in Rome citizens greeted each other by shaking hands—only slaves used the sign adopted by the two dictators.

DISOBEDIENT

An athletic drunk appeared at a ticket window in Louisville with a companion slung over his shoulder out cold. "One seat to Cincinnati," said, "How about that big lug he demanded. The ticket seller you're carrying?" "Him," deprecated the drunk. "Thass jus' my little six-year-old boy, Abner." "Six years old, eh?" said the ticket seller. "Why, he's fully six feet tall, weighs about 185, and has a drunk dumped his companion on beard three inches long." The platform and grumbled, "Damn, Abner! I told you to shaver!"

TABLE TALKS

Jane Andrews

Today's recipes offer fall fruits in tempting desserts.

GLAZED APPLE RING CAKE

2 cups sugar
1/2 cup water
5 apples, pared and cored.
1 cup purée of cooked dried apricots (two cans baby apricots will do)
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 nine- or ten-inch angel cake
Almonds, optional
1 cup apple sauce, chilled
1 cup whipped cream or chilled vanilla pudding
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon.

(1) Boil one cup sugar and water in a frying pan about two minutes, stirring till sugar is dissolved.

(2) Cut apples in half crosswise. Add one layer of apple rings at a time to syrup, lower heat and simmer till just tender, turning often. Remove and set aside.

(3) Cook together apricot purée, remaining cup sugar and lemon juice, stirring often, till mixture is thick. Cool.

Place apples on top of cake. Spread apples and cake generously with apricot purée. Garnish with almonds.

(5) At serving time fill center cavity with apple cream made by mixing apple sauce, cream or pudding and cinnamon. Serve with remaining apple cream and, if desired, garnish plate with additional apple rings. Yield: twelve servings. Note: For a small purchased angel cake use half the recipe.

OLD-FASHIONED

GRAPE PIE

2 pounds concord grapes (four cups)

2/3 to three-fourths cup sugar
1/2 cup flour or one tablespoon quick-cooking tapioca
1/2 teaspoon salt
Rind and juice of one-half lemon
Pastry for a nine-inch two-crust pie.

(1) Slip pulp out of grape skins. Reserve skins. Cook pulp till seeds loosen and press through a colander or food mill.

(2) Mix sugar, flour or tapioca, salt, lemon rind and juice. Add grape juice and skins. If tapioca has been used, let mixture stand fifteen minutes.

(3) Turn into a pastry-lined nine-inch pan and cover with pastry. Bake on the lower rack of a very hot oven (450 degrees F.) Lower heat to moderate (350 degrees F.) and bake about twenty minutes longer. Yield: eight servings.

FRUIT BETTY

2 cups coarse bread crumbs
1/2 cup melted butter
2/3 cup brown or white sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
Dash salt
4 cups sliced plums, peaches, apples or pears
1/3 cup water

(1) Toss crumbs up in melted butter.
(2) Mix sugar cinnamon and salt.

(3) Arrange in alternate layers bread crumbs, fruit and sugar mixture, having top layer crumbs. Add water.

(4) Bake, covered, in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) thirty minutes. Uncover and bake till top has browned and fruit is tender.

WEDDINGS

FLEMING — MANN

A wedding of unusual charm took place at Cherry Valley United Church Friday evening, September 5th, at seven-thirty o'clock, when Muriel Bertha, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Mann, of East Lake Road, was united in marriage to Ross Allan Fleming, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fleming of Madoc.

Beautiful gladioli and fernery formed the effective floral setting for the candlelight service. The doubling ceremony was performed by Rev. Alfred Poulter of Wellington, formerly of Madoc.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was a picture of loveliness in a floor length double skirted gown of white nylon-marquisette over white satin with simulated pearl embroidery. The fitted bodice was of Chantilly lace, the long fitted sleeves having points. Her finger-tip length veil of French Allure embroidered net was held in place with a halo of simulated pearl orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of white baby 'mums and pink roses with white satin ribbon.

The bride's attendants were her two sisters. Miss Margaret Mann, as maid of honour, was lovely in a gown of green nylon marquisette with portrait neck-line, fitted bodice and bouffant skirt. Her headress was of pleated mauve nylon marquisette with simulated pearl trim. She carried a basket of tiny golden 'mums and yellow roses with yellow ribbon.

Miss Kathleen Mann, as bridesmaid, was very pretty in a mauve gown of nylon marquisette with portrait neck-line, fitted bodice and bouffant skirt. Her headress was of pleated mauve nylon marquisette with simulated pearl trim. She carried a basket of tiny golden 'mums and yellow roses with yellow ribbon.

Mell Leavitt, of East Lake, was best man. Mr. John Walton, Cherry Valley, provided traditional wedding music. The ushers were Mr. Alex Mann, East Lake, brother of the bride and Mr. Jack Dunham, of Harold, brother-in-law of the groom.

Miss Beryl Larmer of Peterborough, was soloist and sang "The Lord's Prayer" and during the signing of the register, "Because".

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Mann received the guests, assisted by the groom's mother, Mrs. Fleming. Mrs. Mann wore a lovely gown of navy crepe with trape of pleated taffeta, a navy velvet hat and her corsage was pink roses. Mrs. Fleming wore a becoming gown of navy crepe and lace, a grey hat and her corsage was red roses.

For her honeymoon motor trip in Northern Ontario, the bride chose a two-piece suit of cocoa brown gabardine with mauve lace blouse and mauve feather hat and dark brown accessories.

On their return they expect to reside in Toronto where the groom is attending the Ontario College of Education.

ANNE HIRST

Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: Since my husband died 11 months ago, I've had the only peace I've known since we married. Then he was 40, I was only 15. A month after our wedding, I regretted it. "He was a divorced man and had grown children. They lived with us. I had to wait on them, even do their laundry. Then I had three of my own, and learned what trouble really was! "My husband went out every night. He'd come home in the early hours, drag me out of bed and beat me—even when my babies were on the way. He ran around with all kinds of women, and spent his money. He did buy food for us, but all the clothes the children and I ever had, my family gave us. "Weeks would pass when I wouldn't get out of the house—and he'd accuse me of seeing other men while he was at work! I never even got to a show after we married. "Older men are jealous of their young wives. They're afraid of competition. My friends say I'm too young to stay single (I'm just 20) but I haven't talked to a man of my own age since my husband died. "For I've sworn I'll never marry again. I love my children; they are my whole life. I'm saving every penny of his insurance (and he left plenty) for their future. "I want to warn all young girls against marrying men twice their age. I wish somebody had warned me! HAPPY NOW? "A man who takes advantage of a trusting young girl needs a man to handle him; it is a pity some male member of your family did not intervene. Until you became his wife, he concealed his selfishness and jealousy; afterward, you were as helpless as though he locked you in a tower. And without a champion to do battle for you, only his death set you free. "Now you can help your children forget the frightened years they knew while their father lived, and provide a secure future for you all. "Your determination to stay single is natural—for a time. I hope, however, that some deserving young man will discover you one day, and demonstrate how good and beautiful marriage can be. "You are not alone when trouble comes. Anne Hirst will stand by. A woman of long experience in human relations, wise and kind, she is here to advise you. Address her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ont.

Hear Corn Growing

CAN YOU HEAR corn growing in August? "If you think that is a myth, go listen," says Howard T. Walden II, editor of "Corn," who can write as does no one else about this wondrous crop. "Go into a great corn field," he invites. "Go deep into that sea of corn, so deep that for a hundred yards in every direction corn is surrounding you, standing higher than your head. You will have placed yourself, then in the center of a distinct and special world, a world made up of earth, air, and corn. Nothing else. There is no wind; in the motionless and brooding night there is no reason for any sound. But listen. "There is a whisper, a faint crackling, coming from nowhere and everywhere at once. It might be the ghost of a sound, imagined perhaps. But listen again. It isn't imagined, and it isn't the corn rustling in the wind, for there is no wind. It is the minute stretching of a billion corn leaves, stalks, husks, kernels. It is the dark chemistry of earth, working upward through roots, drawing up through the standing plants, transmuting the essences of soil into life. It is, the sound of growth, a sound perhaps heard by insects and other lowly creatures as a veritable roar of creation. You are as close, here, to the inner quick of nature as ever you'll be. You are listening to the growth of corn."

ECONOMY

The late D. W. Griffith was fond of telling people that in the big Civil War battle scenes of his "The Birth of a Nation" he employed 50,000 extras. When people pointed out that this must have cost him a half million dollars a day for over a hundred days, and marveled "How did you stay solvent?" Griffith would chuckle and say, "I worked out an infallible system. Our soldiers used real bullets."

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

by Geraldine D. Clarke

The last two days have seen me very much occupied with one of the hardest jobs of the year. It might not be hard for everyone but it is for me. That job is getting ready for a five-day holiday. Since Partner will be "batching" my preparations have consisted mostly in leaving him as well provided for as possible so that he can get his own meals with a minimum of effort. It is at such a time that a "frig" cone is mighty handy—a week's supply of pies, fruit and meat can be stacked up quite conveniently.

For me the hardest part of these pre-holiday preparations is keeping my head from wool-gathering. Last time I was away for a couple of days I took Partner's reading glasses away with me as well as my own! I was twenty miles from home when I discovered what I had done. The only thing I could do was phone home and break the news. So long as I let Partner know what happened I knew it would be all right as he had an old pair he could fall back on. Otherwise I could imagine him hunting the house over—and maybe the barn as well—wasting precious time and getting more provoked every minute wondering what on earth had become of those "damn, fool glasses!" Actually, it was a fortunate mistake because the frames were broken, so, while I had them with me, I was able to get the old lenses put into new frames—which would have meant a trip to the city sometime anyway.

In the hurry and scurry of getting away people so often do crazy things—or they forget to do things that should have been done. On my way back from London last June a young couple with two children boarded the train at a country station. About twenty minutes later the girl said to her husband, "Ken, did you shut the front door?" "Well, it is to be hoped it doesn't rain." And then they both started to laugh. And I thought—what a thing it is to be young!

My travels this time are taking me to a point just outside Ottawa. It will be a sort of busman's holiday since these friends of ours also live on a farm. However, I am hoping to see a little bit of Ottawa, as well as the farm where I shall be staying.

Of course, everything happens at once. Last week we had a visitor staying with us until Friday. Then came a press day invitation to the C.N.E. — which I was not expecting—and which I cannot accept without cutting short my Ottawa visit—which I probably shall not want to do. And of course, it is all slap-bang in the middle of the canning and pickling season. Also the twelve-acre field of alfalfa that I mentioned last week is ready to be cut and baled. Partner was looking over the field today.

Conveyance Conbie—thanks to his ingenious father, this Tokyo tyke has a combination tricycle-carriage. When mother doesn't feel like pushing, baby takes over, and when he grows up, this Japanese lad will just remove the bars and presto, he'll have a tricycle.

and decided it didn't show much promise as a seed crop. Unfortunately, by the time one can be sure of seed possibilities the alfalfa is a little too advanced to make good hay. However, one has to take that chance.

There is still threshing to be done in this neighborhood. What with catchy weather and waiting for the threshing machine it must have seemed like a long-drawn-out harvest to our neighbour-Farmers—longer, probably, than when the crop was stowed away in the barn to await the arrival of the threshing machine. Once in the barn worries in connection with wet weather were at an end in those by-gone days.

Partner and I, in conversation with farmers from various other localities, have discovered that many of them prefer the old method of harvesting—if they had the help to cope with it. They contend it is less wasteful and less expensive. We feel that way ourselves.

The Canadian Countryman and Farmer's Advocate in "Weldwood Jottings" gives some interesting figures along these lines. It says, in part—"Machinery takes the hard manual labour out of the grain harvest, but at considerable cost. $2 an acre for swathing, $6 for combining and $12 an hour for putting the straw in the barn makes present day harvesting expensive, particularly with a light crop of straw and grain. It cost 32 cents a bushel for use of machinery and operator to harvest 15 acres of oats on a custom basis, besides the farm help in handling the grain and gathering in the straw." The last sentence is significant because, in spite of high-priced machinery, manpower is still necessary for final handling of any kind of crop, including hay.

Screenless Television—In order to keep sightless listeners posted on programs their neighbors talk about, TV experts designed the above pictureless set seen entertaining Marie Pellicano and Bernard M. Krebs. Experts say using the screenless set overcomes "psychological barriers" which build up between sightless persons and their sighted neighbors.

An average of three murders are discovered in Britain every week, and the percentage of cases cleared up is higher there than any other country in the world. But experts believe that the number of murders committed is actually much higher than the number discovered and investigated.

In many cases the police, although they might have suspicions, are unable to reach any conclusions, and indeed unable to start any inquiries at all.

It is fairly certain that numbers of apparent suicides are really murders, and that many people listed as missing have in reality been quietly put away and their bodies successfully concealed.

Worst Year

The plain truth about murder is that the chances of getting away with it are unfortunately favorable. This was revealed in a murder chart prepared by the Home Office for the Royal Commission on Capital Punishment. Between the years 4900 and 1948 there were 7,318 murders known to the police. In 1,635 cases the suspect committed suicide.

Only 3,042 successful arrests were made, so that 2,641 murderers escaped unscathed. These were murders known to the police. How many unknown murders happened within that same period nobody can tell, but experts estimate that three out of five of all murderers are getting away with it.

The worst year this century was 1945, when 218 people were killed and the police failed to arrest 119 of the killers.

Assuming that murderers enjoy a normal length of life, Home Office figures reveal that there are at least 1,200 of them mixing freely with their fellow-citizens to-day. Although this may be alarming, we can take comfort in the fact that it is rare for any but the professional killer to strike twice. And professional killers are very few in that country. Most notorious of recent times was Haigh, who is thought to have destroyed nine people.

Human Vampire

Startling facts came to light before the eyes of Scotland Yard in 1947 when they began a search for a missing widow, Mrs. Olive Deacon. Several cases of persons who had mysteriously disappeared over a period of three years were linked together. The circumstances were strikingly similar.

In each case letters had given the suspected murderer power to dispose of the property of his victim, but so skilfully had those documents been forged no suspicion arose at the time. Studying these cases, the Yard found that all the victims had business transactions with, and were friends of, one particular man.

The flat which this man had rented was searched, and experts found clues which made them think that human bodies had been disintegrated on the premises by means of an acid bath.

The accusing finger of justice started to point in the direction of John George Haigh. For years he had escaped discovery, but he had made a fatal mistake in his latest killing, that of Mrs. Deacon. He had hurried, and not completed the job thoroughly; a pair of false teeth belonging to the missing widow were found.

"Cheer up! A daughter is a daughter all her life. But maybe you won't have to support her that long."

Haigh's killings were not purely mercenary. For some queer psychological reason, the defence stated, he had become a human vampire, drinking the blood of his victims. A calculating, cold-blooded murderer, obliterating traces of his victims, until he lost his thoroughness and justice grasped him.

Who are the three out of five who never pay for their crimes? Mostly they are hard workers of considerable intelligence who analyze every move and slash the risks to the barest minimum.

They have steady nerves, clear intellects, cautious trigger fingers. They know how to fake or eliminate clues, and so make it impossible for police to carry out early investigation.

Another MAGIC "sure-fire" Success

JAM UPSIDE-DOWN SHORTCAKES

Combine 1 tbs. soft butter, 3/4 c. thick jam, 1 tbs. lemon juice and, if desired, 1/2 c. broken nuts and divide between 6 greased individual baking dishes. Mix and sift twice, then sift into a bowl, 1 1/2 c. once-sifted pastry flour (or 1 1/2 c. once-sifted hard-wheat flour), 3 tps. Magic Baking Powder, 1/2 tsp. salt, 1/4 tsp. grated nutmeg and 3/4 c. fine granulated sugar. Cut in finely 5 tbs. chilled shortening. Combine 1 well-beaten egg, 1/2 c. milk and 1/2 tsp. vanilla. Make a well in dry ingredients and add liquids; mix lightly. Two-thirds fill prepared dishes with batter. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375°, about 20 minutes. Turn out and serve hot with sauce or cream. Yield—6 servings.

WEDDING

BLAKELY—VENN

On September 7th at 2 p.m. a wedding took place in the Methodist Church of Brocton, New York, when Miss Alberta Addie Venn, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Venn, of Brocton, became the bride of Robert Clifford Blakely, son of Mrs. Lottie Blakely and the late Mr. John Blakely, of Eldorado, Ont.

The Rev. John L. Petrie officiated at the wedding ceremony with Mrs. Doris Rogers at the organ and Miss Joanne Navey as soloist.

Given in marriage by her older brother, Arthur Venn, the bride wore a white suit with pink and gold accessories, including a necklace, gift of the groom. Her corsage was of pink roses.

The bride's attendant was Mrs. Ivan Etelee, sister of the bride, who was dressed in a light blue suit with white accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

The groom's attendant was Mr. Albert Venn, twin brother of the bride.

Following the wedding a family reception was held at the home of Mrs. Ivan Steele.

The bride is a graduate of Brocton Central School and for the past ten years has kept house for her parents and cared for her semi-invalid mother.

After a trip to Washington, D. C., the couple will reside at the groom's farm in Eldorado, Ont., Canada.

CARD OF THANKS

Many thanks to neighbours and friends for acts of kindness shown while I was laid up, also special thanks for baskets of fruit and cards received.

IN MEMORIAM

CONLEY—In loving memory of a dear mother, Frances Conley, who passed away September 11, 1948.

She has gone across the river
To the shores of ever green.
And we long to see her dear face
But the river flows between.
Some day, some time, our eyes shall see.

The face we loved so well.
Some day we'll clasp her loving hand
And never say farewell.

Lovingly remembered by daughters,
Frances and Lena and families.

MADOC TENNIS PLAYERS WON AT CAMPBELLFORD

On Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 3rd, seven couples from the Madoc Tennis Club took part in a tennis tournament in Campbellford.

A late afternoon shower delayed the games, but with paved and lighted courts many good sets were enjoyed.

Madoc dominated most of the sets as Campbellford was hampered for lack of players.

A lovely lunch was served by the hosts in the adjacent club house at the bowling green.

Ray Binch, president of the Madoc Club thanked Campbellford players for the hospitality and sportsmanship and invited them to Madoc for a return engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Yearwood wish to announce the engagement of their youngest daughter, Jean Agnes, to Robert Burton Brandon, the marriage to take place September 19th.

MR. AND MRS. ROY WANNAMAKER CELEBRATED 25th ANNIVERSARY

A pleasant evening was spent on Tuesday, September 9th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wannamaker when friends, neighbours and relatives gathered to honour them on the occasion of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary which they celebrated on Sunday, September 7th.

Mr. Ogle Devolin, acting as master of ceremonies, asked the bride and groom of 25 years to take chairs in the centre of the room and a very fine program followed which included a mock wedding, readings, duets and solos.

Mr. James Miller then read an address after which Mr. and Mrs. Wannamaker were presented with a beautiful floor lamp, silver cream and sugar with tray, silver Bon Bon dish, butter dish and a rug for which they both very graciously thanked their friends expressing how much they enjoyed their twenty-five years in the O'Hara community.

Short speeches were made by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Wannamaker, of Stirling, who celebrated their silver anniversary on the same day.

The program was closed with prayer by Rev. R. Walsh.

A bountiful lunch was served and after singing "Blest be the tie that binds" everyone departed for home with the sincere wish to come back and celebrate the golden anniversary.

OBITUARY

JOCK DEMARSH

Jock DeMarsh passed away on Wednesday, September 3rd, after being in ill-health for the past year. Born at Belleville, 70 years ago, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis DeMarsh. He had resided in the Trenton district for the past 16 years, previous to which he lived at Madoc.

The funeral took place on Saturday, September 6th, to St. Alphonsus' Church, for Solemn Requiem Mass. Interment took place at Codrington R. C. cemetery. Bearers were Gordon Flynn, Dave MacDonald, Will Empey, Arthur Pigden, Ben Miller and Lou Fox.

CHARLES W. MITTS

Charles W. Mitts, a resident of Ivanhoe, for the past eight years, died at his home September 10th, after a lengthy illness. He was in his 55th year.

The deceased was born in Crookston, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mitts. He resided in Parry Sound and Toronto prior to moving to Ivanhoe, eight years ago.

Two brothers, Elton and Frank Mitts, were killed overseas. The deceased served overseas with the 149th Battalion for four years.

He was a member of the United Church.

WEDDING

WOODCOX-CLARKE

Frankford United Church decorated with standards of gladioli and fern was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Monday, September 1st, at four o'clock when Jean Phyllis, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clarke, of Queensboro, Ont., was united in marriage to Lorison Keith Woodcox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Woodcox, of Actinolite, Ont.

Rev. R. McEachern performed the double ring ceremony. Miss Carma Fuller, of Trenton, cousin of the groom, played the wedding music and Mrs. H. Langdon of Trenton, sang prior to the ceremony "Because" and "I Love You Truly" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her grandfather, Mr. John Kelly, of Eldorado, Ont., looked lovely in a gown of nylon marquisette over satin with a circular train. A row of lace was formed at the waist and at the neck giving an off the shoulder effect. Her long sleeves came to a lily point at the wrist. Her matching finger-tip veil was held in place by sweetheart seeded pearls and she carried a cascade bouquet of red and white roses and fern.

She wore a triple strand of pearls and ear-rings, the gift from the groom.

Maid of honour was Miss Ana Woodcox, of Frankford, only sister of the groom. She was gown in powder blue nylon net over nylon with matching hat and gloves. She carried a nosegay of yellow mums centred with red roses and gladioli petals formed the outside. Miss Barbara Clarke was her sister's flower girl gown in pink satin trimmed with lace and matching bonnet. She carried a small basket of mixed flowers.

Laurence Woodcox, nephew of the groom, was ring-bearer, carrying the rings on a white satin cushion.

The best man was Mr. Cecil Skoring of Ivanhoe, Ont., and Mr. Ronald Gould, of Toronto, and Mr. Kenneth Broad of Madoc, were ushers.

The reception was held at Glen Miller Club House for about seventy guests. The bride's mother received in black and white figured crepe with pink and black accessories. She was assisted by the groom's mother, Mrs. Woodcox, wearing a powder blue lace over crepe and black accessories. Both wore corsages of red and white roses.

Following the reception the happy couple left on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls, N.Y., the bride travelling in a navy suite with navy and pink accessories. Her corsage was of sweetheart roses and orchids.

MR. AND MRS. ROSS FLEMING HONORED

On Monday evening, September 15th, friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fleming to pay tribute to Ross and Muriel Fleming, recently returned from their wedding trip in Northern Ontario and U.S.A.

A large crowd enjoyed the nicely arranged programme of readings, songs and contests, during which Mrs. Drinkwater read an address and Bill Derry presented the couple with a beautiful tri-light lamp.

A short fitting reply was then made by Ross, after which the ladies served a delicious lunch, while everyone enjoyed a friendly informal visit. After extending best wishes and congratulations to the happy couple, the friends departed to their various homes.

LOCAL and PERSONAL

Mrs. Kingston, of Vancouver, is the guest of her sisters, Mrs. S. Rollins and Miss Vankleek in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Bailey, of Montreal, were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Bailey over the weekend.

Miss Gladys Desson and Miss Jo. Waywhite, Chapleau, spent a few days visiting at the home of Mrs. A. Bruyns.

Mrs. Ed Taylor and son, Ralph spent Thursday and Friday in Peterborough, the guests of her daughter, Mrs. Tom Foley and Mr. Foley.

Mrs. W. Tait, who has been hospitalized at the Bruyns' Nursing Home with a broken hip for the past seven weeks following a mishap early in July returned to the home of her son, Harry last week.

Strange Ways of Paying Debts

Once a month an Alsatian dog named Duke trots into a bank in Tulsa, Oklahoma, and barks for the manager. Then in a business-like way Duke signs a cheque for $20 or so with his paw and trots smartly home with the cash stowed in a wallet in his collar.

Like the well-known Dorsetshire horse with a bank account, Duke's bank account is perfectly legal. As a "seeing-eye" guide dog to Mr. Bob Triplett, a blind business man, he earns a salary which his master charges against income tax as expenses. His pawed cheques, however, are sent to head office as banking curiosities.

There they join up with the $20,000 cheque scrawled in red chalk on a plank which a Californian made out when he found himself without ready cash in a timber yard. And there's the gruesome exhibit of a big toe, complete with a signature, which an ex-husband angrily made out as a cheque for alimony and sent to his wife. "It's cash on the nail!" she said, and cashed it!

It's just 70 years since the British Parliament passed a Bill of Exchange Act which effectively regularized commercial practice with regard to cheques around the world. When an R.A.F. officer made out a cheque on a 2d. stamp, however, it was cashed because it fulfilled all legal requirements.

Financially, cheques have no limit in size. One of the fattest personal cheques ever cashed was the £25,747,841 sent to a New Jersey business man when the Argentine Government took over his telephone system. Britain sent a £73,553,000 cheque to Australia for her wool clip some years ago. Received Cheque For One Penny On London's Underground rail-

For Moderns: A Living-Room Dinette Set

BY EDNA MILES

THE modern concept of dining-room furniture is a very different one from that owned by Grandmother. She wanted solid, heavy furniture that made a good show and filled the dining room to the very corners. This furniture, which the hired girl kept polished, was used only for "good" or company occasions. The rest of the time, the family ate in the kitchen.

In these times of small apartments and houses, dining-room furniture must be functional. There's just one set and it serves both family and company. Frequently, it is placed in one end of the living room since there is no dining room at all.

Therefore, it must blend harmoniously with the living-room furnishings. And modern finishes for table tops and legs have made the hired girl's elbow obsolete.

One innovation is the use of thin steel tubing in chrome or ebony for modern tables and chairs. Table tops are plastic with wood grain finish and cannot be marred by stains.

The new tubing combines strength with a look of delicacy and, of course, easy maintenance with comfort. Seats of the chairs are sponge rubber padded and upholstered in two patterns and a wide range of colors.

←Dinette set in ebony colorama is designed for modern homes and apartments with dining areas at one end of living room.

way a man in a hurry found himself without the fare, so he wrote out a cheque for 2d. It was accepted at the booking clerk's discretion. The Mayor of Southampton once bought a 1d. platform ticket... and the railway refunded the 1d. by cheque because he was entitled to free access to Southampton Station.

Some people consider that modern cheques are sadly drab and orthodox. But a new festive cheque system has developed in America. A bank clerk designed gay cheques for Christmas, birthdays and other special occasions and now they are being used by banks in thirty-eight states.

This decreed that of all land under cultivation one-third must remain fallow every year to prevent it becoming exhausted.

In Townshend's system none of the land was allowed to lie fallow. It was divided into four fields, in which roots and grasses for cattle and sheep were alternately grown with cereals. By this rotation of crops—now known universally as the "Norfolk Rotation"—the land which used to lie empty was enriched with nitrogen.

In addition, the manure which had been allowed to remain on the rough wastelands where the cattle grazed was more profitably employed in increasing the fertility of the cultivated soil.

In less than a decade the remarkable results achieved by Townshend's system convinced farmers that this was the very basis of good agriculture.

Farmers all over the world began to use his maxim: "First, roots (turnips or other root crops); second, barley; third, clover or grass; fourth, wheat."

What his innovation has meant to this and other countries in hard cash and increased food supply could never be computed. It made possible the raising of cattle and sheep which have made England pre-eminent as the source of the world's finest livestock, and has brought prosperity to farmers throughout the Commonwealth and the New World.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By

REV. R. BARCLAY WARREN, B.A., B.D.

THE GLORY OF SOLOMON'S EMPIRE

1 Kings 4:20-26; 11:4-8
Memory Selection: A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth. Luke 12:15

The kingdom of Israel reached its zenith in material prosperity during the reign of Solomon. It was indeed magnificent. When the visiting Queen of Sheba had seen Solomon's wisdom, the temple, his servants, etc., "there was no more spirit in her." She exclaimed, "The half was not told me: thy wisdom and prosperity exceedeth the fame which I heard." But the latter part of Solomon's life was tragic. He took to himself 700 wives and 300 concubines. Many of these were foreigners and he tolerated their idolatry. Then his wives turned away his heart after their gods. He himself became an idolater.

The dazzling splendor of Solomon's empire and its effect upon his character is a drama of the perils of prosperity, both to nations and to individuals. Many men, like Solomon, have sought satisfaction in the gaining of things or in sensual pleasures. Others have sought knowledge for its own sake. Such finally conclude as Solomon that "All is vanity and vexation of spirit." Wise is he who prays, "Give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me."

TABLE TALKS

Jane Andrews

First, today, a really hearty pork dish. Then, after that, a few new—I hope—ways of using tomatoes.

HAM BALLS

1 Pound Ground Ham
1 Pound Ground Pork
2 Eggs
1 Cup Cracker Crumbs
½ Teaspoon Salt
½ Teaspoon Pepper
¾ Cup Water
2 Tablespoons Brown Sugar
1½ Tablespoons Peanut Butter
1½ Teaspoons Worcestershire Sauce

Combine the ham, pork, eggs, cracker crumbs, salt and pepper, mixing thoroughly. Shape into 16 balls and place in a flat baking dish. Combine the remaining ingredients, stirring until the sugar is dissolved and the peanut butter is well distributed. Pour sauce over the meat balls and bake uncovered in a moderate oven (375° F.) about an hour, or until meat is done and most of the sauce is absorbed. Baste occasionally with the sauce. These are especially good made early and reheated just before serving. Makes 8 servings.

Tomatoes may be cooked in a great variety of ways. They may be stewed, fried, broiled, escalloped, baked, curried, stuffed, made into sauces and soups, or combined with other foods.

SALLY'S SALLES

"Have you any other than regular or superservice? I like to try them all."

lest I be full, and deny thee, and say, 'Who is the Lord?' or lest I be poor, and steal, and take the name of my God in vain." Prov. 30:8, 9. The rich are exposed to subtle temptations. No wonder Jesus said, "It is easier to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God." When asked by the astonished disciples, "Who then can be saved?" He replied, "With men it is impossible, but not with God: for with God all things are possible."

On Solomon's death the kingdom was divided. The maintaining of the magnificent splendor had put an unbearable burden upon the people and Rehoboam, Solomon's son, was a poor strategist in dealing with the discontent.

Canada's development is higher than ever before. We are a great nation in wealth. But what about our morals? The report on Alcoholism, gambling, divorce, etc., is not so good. We need to turn back to God.

The simplest method of preparing them is, perhaps, stewing. You may like onions or celery added to them and you can use green tomatoes if you wish.

STEWED TOMATOES

6 medium tomatoes, ripe or green
1 tablespoon minced onion (if desired)
1 teaspoon salt
Pinch of pepper
½ teaspoon sugar for ripe; 1 tablespoon for green
1 tablespoon fat
½ cup soft bread crumbs

Quarter tomatoes, peeling the ripe ones, and add onion. Cover and cook until tender (10-20 minutes for ripe ones; 20-35 minutes for green ones). Add all other ingredients, except bread crumbs. Just before serving sprinkle crumbs over tomatoes.

In the South it is considered that the best fried tomatoes are those picked green when a faint blush of pink is on them. They are firm, but not too tart. Never peel them (or ripe ones you fry, either, as the skin helps hold them together). Cut medium slices and dip in corn meal and fry in bacon grease until they are crisp and brown and done through. If they break up a little it doesn't matter—you may use your spoon if you like, to get all the crisp goodness.

Use bacon grease remaining in skillet and all the little crisp corn meal morsels that have fallen off the tomato slices and make a cream gravy to use for a sauce. Salt them a little, of course.

Ripe tomatoes are also delicious fried this way. There is a dip-them-in-flour school for fried tomatoes, too—but many southerners believe its members just haven't tasted tomatoes fried in bacon grease and corn meal!

Perhaps you would like a hearty one-dish meal using ripe tomatoes. Here is a casserole that makes an entire meal.

LAYERED TOMATO BAKE

8 slices of red, ripe tomatoes (or more)
4 ounces elbow macaroni
1½ cups milk
1½ cups soft bread crumbs
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1½ tablespoons prepared mustard
1 cup cubed Canadian cheese
1½ cups cubed cooked ham
¾ cup buttered bread crumbs
Cook, rinse and drain macaroni. Combine milk, soft bread crumbs, salt, Worcestershire sauce, mustard and cheese in saucepan. Heat slowly until ingredients are well blended and creamy. Fold in ham and macaroni. Pour half of this mixture into greased 2-quart casserole. Place on this layer of tomato slices. Add remaining mixture; top with another layer of tomato slices. Cover with buttered bread crumbs. Bake at 375° for 35 minutes. Serves 4.

A good luncheon dish that is a meat substitute is tomatoes combined with hard-cooked eggs.

CREOLE EGG-TOMATO CASSEROLE

1½ tablespoons shortening
¼ cup chopped green peppers
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1½ tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups stewed or raw tomatoes
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1½ cups soft bread crumbs
5 hard-cooked eggs, sliced

Melt shortening and add peppers and onions and sauté until tender. Add flour, salt and tomatoes. Melt butter in another pan and sauté bread crumbs until brown. Arrange alternate layers of sliced eggs, buttered crumbs and tomato in a greased 1-quart casserole. Using crumbs to top. Bake at 350° F. for 30 minutes. Six servings.

Baked stuffed tomatoes are always good, and there are many types of stuffing that you may like. Bread crumbs, hard-cooked eggs and cottage cheese may be used; spaghetti, mushrooms and ground meat with a little Canadian cheese make another stuffing. Rice or mashed potatoes may be seasoned and combined with chopped liver or any of the popular seafoods for other stuffings. Here are stuffed tomatoes made with corn chips which your family will like.

CORN-CHIP STUFFED TOMATOES

1 medium onion, minced
1½ tablespoons fat
1 teaspoon salt
1 pound ground beef
1 can tomato puree (10½ ounces)
1 cup crushed corn chips, measured after crushing
8 whole red ripe tomatoes
Sauté onion in fat; add beef and salt and stir well. Cover and cook 10 minutes. Add tomato puree and centers from tomatoes. Sprinkle cavity with salt, fill with meat mixture. Place in oiled baking dish and bake 20-30 minutes at 350° F. Shells should be tender.

THE FARM FRONT

by John Russell

"Let us now praise famous men" is the first line of one of King's finest poems—a poem in which he sings the praise of the common folk—"men of little showing." This column, too, is going to be in praise of something common and inconspicuous; but don't go away, I'm not going to burst into verse. To get down to the point, here are some interesting facts which may be new to you, as they were new to me up to a few minutes ago, regarding THE TURNIP.

In the year 1730 a 56-year-old ex-Prime Minister of England went to Hanover, Germany, brought back a turnip, and set in motion the greatest revolution in the history of farming.

His name was Viscount Townshend—"Turnip" Townshend to all farmers ever since—and but for his foresight the great harvests being reaped this month in all parts of the world might not have been possible.

Had it not been for him and his disciples there would have been no great industrial revolutions in England and other countries, for it would have been impossible to feed the multitude that were beginning to enter the mills, factories and workshops.

Moreover, the rapid expansion of the Anglo-Saxon race overseas would not have taken place, and the population of other countries—notably the United States—that have followed Britain in building up great industries would have been checked.

For over thirty years Townshend had been a prominent political figure in England. He helped negotiate the Act of Union between England and Scotland, drew up many of the various Continental powers, was Prime Minister, and helped to establish the House of Hanover on the throne of England.

Yet all his substantial political achievements are forgotten to-day because of the great things he did during the last eight years of his life when he had abandoned politics for ever.

There had been Townshends at Rainham, in Norfolk, for centuries at the time Charles, second Viscount Townshend was born in 1674, and to-day the family still lives at Rainham Hall.

Norfolk bore no resemblance to the fair, richly-cultivated country we know to-day. Most of it was given over to sheep walks and rabbit warrens. In the lands of Townshend's neighbour, Coke of Holkham, the soil was so unproductive that it was believed two rabbits would quarrel over a single blade of grass.

When he retired from public life Townshend inspected the forlorn acres and though of the rich farmlands he had seen in Hanover during his travels as a politician, he had been told, was because the turnip was the farmers' principal crop.

Townshend decided to make some experiments with turnips on his own land. The English method of tilling, he reasoned, was wasteful simply because nobody had ever challenged the hoary old manorial system introduced at the Norman Conquest.

FUNDS FOR THE BLIND TO BE HELD HERE

Last year the total cost of all the services to the 120 blind persons of Hastings County, including Belleville and Trenton, was $7,143.53. This is an average cost of about $60. for each person on the registry, a very reasonable figure when one considers the type of services rendered. Residents of Hastings County will be interested in these facts at this time when the Board is making its annual appeal to them for the funds that are absolutely necessary if this programme is to be maintained for another year.

Through Institute services, the blind are able to find some compensation for the loss of sight. To some the blind home teacher gives instruction in the various skills that help to make blindness more endurable: handicrafts, the reading of Braille or Moon type, the use of the typewriter, or the playing of games adapted for the use of the blind such as checkers, chess, cribbage bridge and even canasta. Some are making use of the C. N. I. B. library of thousands of titles in Braille or Moon type. For those who are unable to master the touch reading, there is the talking book library, full-length book on records which the blind reader can enjoy on a special machine for this purpose. The Board has ten such machines out on loan with the blind of this area. Radio plays an important role in the lives of the blind, and the Board gives definite service along this line; sets are placed on loan and batteries and repairs are provided those who might not be able to provide these for themselves. For those who are still employable, blind placement officers try to find suitable employment in C.N.I.B. shops and in outside industry. A number of the blind of this county are now enjoying independence because they are able to support themselves through the Institute's employment programme.

Valuable concessions obtained by the Institute help to make the lives of those condemned to live in darkness less difficult. Through its welfare services, the C.N.I.B. cares for the necessitous blind of this district.

"It is a rare privilege to share in the difficult task of readjustment to a handicap, or of bringing a ray of comfort and sunshine into darkened lives, but this is your privilege when you contribute to the appeal for funds now being conducted in Hastings County", Mr. Wishart concluded. The campaign in Madoc will be under the direction of Mrs. J. W. Huhn, the local member of the Hastings County board, with the co-operation of various canvassers and citizens.

ANNE HIRST
 Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: I have a nice sweetheart, whom I love dearly. In a short time we hope to get married. But I am worried."

"He likes to drink a lot. He never wants to stay home; he prefers to go out with his cousins and other friends. I don't like the idea. When I marry, I want a home, with him there."

"He says he will always love me, and if I don't marry him he doesn't want anyone else. He has always been true to me. Is there anything I can do to keep him from running around so much?"

WITH LOVE

TROUBLE AHEAD
 The very least that an engaged couple should have in common is the life they'll lead after they marry. When the two hold such opposing views as you do, how can you believe you could live happily together? A young man who likes to drink and run around with his boy friends, is just not good husband material. You two are deeply in love, you say. But you are wise enough to sense that love alone cannot guarantee a good life for either of you. If he expects to continue his present habits, you would be in conflict with each other from the very start. You want a home, contentment and security. You cannot be sure of any of these if, first, you marry a man who drinks, and secondly, one whose ideal home is only a place to eat and sleep.

Most engaged young men spend every hour possible with their fiancées. If, even before you marry, your fiancé prefers to gad about with others, how can you believe his pretty protests of love and eternal devotion? You had better settle this now. Make him understand that you cannot marry him until he stops drinking (and long enough to prove, that he can) and unless he shows that he had rather be with you than with anyone else in the world. An occasional evening with his friends, yes. But not as a habit.

"This is a crisis in your life. See it clearly, and act."

TEEN-AGE PROBLEM

"Dear Anne Hirst: I've been going with a girl for three months. Her parents insist she must double-date until next year, when she is 16. They also choose the girl to go along, and it is annoying."

"The girl friend is not popular, so I always have to find a different boy for her every time. And I'm running out of friends."

"We've discussed this often. My girl is determined not to lie to her parents, even if she could, which I doubt."

"That's my problem. Can you help me?"

CHARLIE

"You really have a problem, haven't you?
 Can't your girl double-date with another girl friend or two?
 Or do I understand her parents insist that this one alone is acceptable?
 Another solution is for you two to see each other in larger groups, at school parties and dances, football games, and at church, or in homes of her friends. Also, both of you should be dating others, or I'm afraid your friendship will not last as long as you hope."

"I'm glad you and the girl refuse to descend to deceiving her parents. That would be a poor return for their hospitality—and you would lose the girl as well."

Don't think of marrying a man whose ideas of marriage conflict with yours. You could not win. Anne Hirst will help you analyze the possible success of your future, if you write her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ont.

REAL EXERCISE

A guest at one of those Florida health resorts flatly refused to follow the prescribed schedule of set-up exercises and work-outs. "I came here to eat and rest," he insisted. "Exercise is ridiculous."

As the guest was checking out, the proprietor pleaded: "Before you leave, just do one bit of exercise for me—to keep my record clear. Please just bend down, keep your knees stiff, and touch your valise." The man bent over and said, "Well, I'm touching my valise. What now?" "Open it," said the proprietor, "and give me back my towels."

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM
 by Gwendoline D. Clarke

Well, here we are, back home again at the old farm. Back home again after a wonderful six-day holiday, which I spent on a farm just outside Ottawa. But the farm I was staying on was very different from our own. It was a show place with 90 head of R.O.P. Guernsey cattle, housed in huge barns with all the usual accommodation that goes with such places, including fluorescent lighting over each stall. For field work there was a full line of power machinery. There were also added features that attracted much public attention. In separate enclosures there was a buck and two deer; two raccoons, some ducks of a fancy breed; guinea fowls and six pens of different kinds of golden pheasants. Strutting around the yard were also a number of peacocks, two of them dead-white and the others with the traditional blue-green markings. At night they roosted on top of the silo—and woke me up each morning. Unfortunately all these peacocks were minus their tails as this is the moulting season. The house stood in landscaped grounds close to the highway. Across the road lush green pasture sloped gently down to the Rideau River.

However, my hostess and I did not linger overly long at the farm. Instead we were out each day and really saw Ottawa. I had heard our capital was a lovely place but I was not prepared for the outstanding scenic beauty of its Canal and rivers; its beautiful shade trees and the marvellous greenness that was everywhere. For me water is always a major attraction in scenery and in Ottawa one nearly always has it in sight from the Canal, the Rideau River or the Ottawa River. We went for drives and walks along the Parkways, and for a boat ride on the Canal. We saw Ottawa from the top of the Peace Tower and looked up to it from the valleys below. We drove along the shaded, winding road by Rideau Hall; we visited Hog's Back, Long Island and Manotick, and we saw locks open and close to let through pleasure yachts and motor boats. Here we picked up some surprising information. We naturally supposed there would be a toll for boat-owners using the locks. But no, even though it might be only a small motor launch, the locks would be operated free of charge, from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. As the man at the winch observed—it is the only tax-free accommodation enjoyed by the travelling public. But free service has this result: the revenue received from the locks last year was considerably less than the actual operating costs. Which means, I suppose, that everybody pays—through taxation—while those who actually use the locks do so at no additional cost.

Probably the outstanding feature of our sight-seeing pleasures was a trip by bus to Gananoque and then a cruise by motor launch through the Thousand Islands. It was on one of those days when everyone on land was limp with the heat but on the water it was ideal.

The Thousand Islands! Nothing I might write could adequately describe their beauty. For nearly three hours we cruised along the St. Lawrence River, weaving our way in and out and around the channels between the islands. On the bigger islands there were magnificent summer homes; on the smaller ones there might be only one house. And on some none at all. One of the islands that captures the imagination is Heart Island, where George Boldt, of Waldorf-Astoria fame, fulfilled a boyhood dream by building an immense castle, and changing the shape of the island to that of a heart. He had already spent $3,000,000 on it when his wife died. Mr. Boldt was so grief-stricken that he immediately stopped all work on the castle. It was never resumed. The castle now stands a tragic, massive structure in partial ruins.

Having got this far in my description I must descend to the mundane of ordinary farm life. Partner just came in hot and bothered. He had been hunting for over an hour for a new calf, the first off-spring of a young heifer. The heifer came home without the calf. Partner searched the creek, the bushes and the pastures. No calf. And now it was milking time. I suggested that he go on with the milking and I would take up the hunt. It was beginning to get dusk and I had had no better luck. Then I noticed the heifer was behaving a little suspiciously. I approached the spot where she stood and there was the calf completely hidden in a patch of tall grass and weeds as effectively as Moses in the bulrushes. In triumph I slowly propelled the cow and calf through the tangled pasture back to the barn.

This Cat Wouldn't Leave Sinking Ship

A cat nicknamed Carlsen refused to leave a wrecked freighter off Land's End recently. He had found the larger well stocked with chicken. A box-trap had to be set to rescue him before the ship broke up.

Ships' cats to-day are usually pampered pets. In the old days they had a definite job—keeping down the rats. But now, when ships are frequently fumigated and rats are few, a sea-going cat can take things pretty easily. Tabbies love ships and are rarely seasick.

Minnie, a handsome cat aboard a famous liner, earned fame as the favourite of passengers who stroked and fed her with tithes. She appeared half-drowned when she first walked up the first-class gangway of the liner in New York, one snowy day. Sailors put her ashore three times because they thought the ship's canaries might fall prey to her. But Minnie won in the end. She walked up the third-class gangway at the last moment and sailed for England—the first of many transatlantic voyages she was destined to enjoy.

Wines and Spirits

The ship's cat and her five kittens had to be sealed up in the bond room when another liner arrived at Plymouth in 1947. The cats had made their home among thousands of bottles of wines and spirits, and when Customs men went to seal up the store they refused to come out. They were finally released when the ship continued her voyage to Amsterdam.

Sailors have been amazed at the sure-footedness of cats at sea even in the stormiest weather. Most ships' cats have a special bed which is often a little hammock. And woe betide any wandering dock cats which try to come aboard when the ship touches port. The ship's cat will invariably "see them off."

Dockside Holidays

Cats have been known to desert a ship in a foreign port and take a few days' holiday at the docks. They then show away on the next incoming ship of the same line, walk off again at the home port—and wait there for their original ship to arrive! When Captain E. F. Ferraby, master of the motor vessel Paranga, left Sydney the ship's black-and-white cat was missing.

"She was a nice little thing and we were all very sorry," he said. "But after we had been in Brisbane a couple of days another ship, the Aagtekerk, arrived from Sydney and hadn't been in a couple of hours when, trotting down the wharf, came our little cat."

The Aagtekerk lay fully three miles from us with a complicated network of streets in between. I would have lost my way a dozen times; but the captain of the Aagtekerk told me that the cat just went on board at Sydney and lived quietly in his cabin on the run up."

MEN WHO THINK OF TOMORROW PRACTISE MODERATION TODAY

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

It was on a humid night in early July with St. Louis Browns and Cleveland Indians battling desperately in a low-scoring American League baseball game, that a slim, wiry Negro was called from the St. Louis bullpen, and rushed to the mound in emergency.

Ordinarily, this wouldn't be unusual. But this Negro was at least 50 years old. Perhaps more. Yet for inning after inning, he stood on the pitching hill, defying the power of Cleveland's heavy-hitting team to score a run off him.

Inning after inning, he flung his pitching wizardry at the enemy. Baffled by his streaking fast ball, his tantalizing curves, the power-house team went runless. Not until ten scoreless innings had been pitched by this veteran Negro, did Cleveland break through with the winner.

The Negro was Satchell Paige, one of baseball's most fabulous personalities. And this, his second such effort of the season, rates, we think as one of the great feats of the baseball year, something to enthrall those who like to see a wrong righted.

The wrong was this: Here is a man who was probably the finest pitcher of his time, and his time was long. But he had no chance to prove it.

Seems to us we have heard of the feats of "Old Satch" ever since we started growing up, though literally that can't be true. Competent baseball men told us for years that Paige would burn up either big league, until the opportunity.

At a late date in life, at an age when most ballplayers are not good enough for minor leagues, even Satchell Paige got his belated chance.

For fame came late to Satchell. It was not until the twilight of his amazing career that he was given a chance to pitch in the big leagues—by Bill Veeck at Cleveland. There, in 1948, he got a chance to pitch in his first World Series.

You can spend some time speculating what a pitcher Paige must have been 20 years ago, when there was more steel and rubber in his pitching-arm. That today he could "at his age," pitch 10 scoreless games in top company makes one stand ready to believe any legendary tale they tell of "Old Satch's" fabulous exploits—2,000 games pitched in 20 years, for instance. That's a game every 3 1/2 days, the year "round." "Satch" probably did it.

An amazing figure, and a notable addition to the list of those who prove that while life may begin at 40, competitive life doesn't end there, in sport, with such exhibits as Willie Hoppe, Jersey Joe Walcott, Bob Fitzsimmons, and Bill Cook offered on behalf of the defence.

Your comments and suggestions for this column will be welcomed by Elmer Ferguson, c/o Calvert House, 431 Yonge St., Toronto.

SPORTS & by A SIXBIT CRITIC

If the New York Yankees manage to make it again this year—by no means a certainty at this writing, but still they're out in front by a couple of lengths—no little part of the credit must go to Billy Martin. For young Mr. Martin seems to be one of those "throwbacks" seen all too seldom these days—a ball player who plays not for money, but for the sheer love of the game.

Of course, he gets paid—well paid at that. But his attitude to the sport is close to that of Babe Ruth when he was starting out. Babe, told what salary he was going to get from Jack Dunn's Baltimore team, is said to have blurted, in genuine amazement, "You don't mean to say they PAY folks for playing ball?"

Casey Stengel has been high on Billy Martin right from the first. "That's my boy" has been his answer to everybody who suggested that Martin be part of a trade or deal. In the New York Times recently Arthur Daley had some interesting things to say about the young infielder.

Martin has been a solid man in his infield for most of the season and would have been lots better if he hadn't had the misfortune to break an ankle during spring training. Billy was hotter than a $2 pistol in the South. Stengel, the Machiavellian schemer, was figuring on him as a regular somewhere in the infield because service calls soon would claim Jerry Coleman and Bobby Brown. But the kid's crack-up ended that notion, delayed his start and impaired his effectiveness.

"As near as I've been able to calculate," said Billy with rueful modesty, the other day, "that ankle cost me twenty or thirty points in my batting average. I was right in the hitting groove in Florida and would have had a big jump on the pitchers before they settled down. Not only did I have to start all over again when I returned, but my ankle slowed me up just enough so that I was missing the close ones instead of getting them. But as long as the team wins, what's the difference?"

In many respects Billy the Kid is a throwback to the old-time ball players, a snarling scrapper obsessed with the idea of winning. He's irreverent, cocky and, on occasions, downright mean. That's when he is in uniform. Out of uniform, he's quiet, modest, polite and as nice a kid as you'd ever want to meet. No wonder Stengel is so crazy about him.

Plowettes Unplug Snow-Filled Drives

A. S. Jaffe and Mike Morris, fed up with driveway-shoveling on snowy mornings, invented plowettes to do the job. Jaffe, seen above, is attaching the V-bladed snow-cleaver to his bumper. It will clear wheel-width paths; worked well in snow and sand tests.

The Old Professor first fell for him when he managed the brash Mr. Martin at Oakland. After one ball game, which the Oaks barely won, Billy came to his skipper in abject apology for a most peculiar play he'd made.

"I hadn't oughter have done it, Case," he said contritely. "It mighta cost us the ball game. But I couldn't resist. The last time I went to bat that pitcher was throwing at my head. He'd been lowering the boom at me all day. So when he comes to bat, I call time and talk to our pitcher."

"Jonesey, I tell him. That guy's been lowbridging me. You gotta throw at his head in order to protect me. He won't do it. So I go over to him again. Jonesey, I say, 'You gotta protect me or I won't protect you. If you don't low-bridge him, maybe I won't come up with the double-play ball you need.'"

"Well, Case, I guess I was wrong in telling him that. He don't lower the boom on him and the other pitcher walks. Then I was even more wrong in what I did. The next batter hits the double-play ball. I step on the bag, pivot and—Case, I'm almost ashamed at what I did. I should have thrown to first. But I see that big goof of a pitcher coming down the line and I throw the ball at his head. Someone has to teach that guy good manners. Our pitcher won't do it. So I did it myself. I'm sorry, Case. I won't let it happen any more." As an afterthought he added, "Unless maybe he low-bridges me again."

Once the pennant was clinched last season, Stengel started a junior varsity team. Martin walked over to Phil Rizzuto near the batting cage.

"Out of the way, you little squirt," he said cheerfully. "Us regulars gotta hit, and you're just a substitute today. I've decided that I'm the captain of this team and you better do what the captain says."

"Yes, sir," said Phil mischievously. "I mean—yes, capt'n."

Martin has been the unofficial captain of the Yankees ever since.

Bellicose Billy hit the headlines twice this season by hitting enemy ball players. He belted Cliff Courtney of the Browns when Courtney objected with his fists to the too vigorous manner in which Martin tagged him.

But before that he tangled in wordy battles with Jim Piersall of the Red Sox until a certain remark compelled him to finish off Piersall in a brisk fist fight under the clubhouse. To Martin it was the insult supreme.

"You fresh bushy," taunted Piersall. Billy Martin is awfully fresh but he's no bushy.

PARTING WISH

Judge Jim Wallace, of the New York Supreme Court, remembers when two natives of County Cork occupied adjoining cells in the death house. The dread morning arrived when Paddy was scheduled to be led to the electric chair. The Governor had failed to grant a reprieve, and Paddy knew his case was hopeless. As the guards came to lead him down "the last mile," his friend Mike in the next cell strove desperately to think of something cheering to say. At the last moment, he waved his hand through the bars and called jovially, "Well, Paddy me boy, more power to ye!"

Milk And Honey The Perfect Foods

The specialist shrugged his shoulders eloquently. The patient with stomach trouble had refused the operation suggested and left the consulting-room. For two years he had existed on sloppy foods, and now had neither energy nor stamina, but only a desire to get well and live a normal life.

It was a bee-keeper friend who suggested a diet of honey, a suggestion which was accepted on the principle of trying everything once. At the end of six months the patient felt a new man, no longer having to spend eighteen hours a day in bed and leaving his wife to run their business. At the end of a year he was normal—and cured. Honey had done the trick yet once again.

Milk, Too

Honey is Nature's perfect food, one of her only two products intended solely as food. Milk is the other one.

Honey is manufactured. The honey-making bee sips the nectar from the flowers, mixes it with juices from specialised salivary glands, and evaporates the surplus water. When it is ripe she seals it in cells of the comb, and then it is safe for a thousand years and more; pure food you might say for all time.

Its main constituents are dextrose, levulose, and sucrose—grape, fruit, and cane sugars. It also contains, among other things, copper, manganese, chlorine, calcium, sulphur, phosphorus, magnesium, iron, silica.

It is hygroscopic—that is, it draws moisture from anything and everything with which it comes in contact, which is why germs cannot live in pure honey. It draws out the water on which they live.

Experiments conducted in the U.S.A. prove that the germ causing typhoid fever can only live in honey for 48 hours; that the germ causing dysentery is rendered impotent in 10 hours; and the germ mainly responsible for bronchial pneumonia has "had it" after four days.

Ambrosia

American hospitals have used honey for the treatment of wounds for many years, and now it is announced that one great English hospital is using honey exclusively for the dressing of surgical wounds in its operating theatre.

Honey is the great energy-provider, its sugars being absorbed in the bloodstream within 10 minutes of being eaten or drunk in water. It is also a fine nightcap if a teaspoonful is taken in a cup of hot water, since it induces sleep.

A solution of honey and water in equal parts will not freeze solid, but a similar sugar solution will. Because of this a mixture of honey and water was until recently used as an anti-freeze liquid in automobile radiators.

The ancients were fully aware of the virtues of honey, and used it as food, medicine, ointment, and as a hair-restorer. The Romans mixed it with fruit juices and drank it as a health-giving beverage. The Greeks mixed it with milk and called it ambrosia, and the finest honey in the ancient world came from the slopes of Mount Hymettus a few miles outside Athens, where thyme grew in great profusion.

In Hot Water

It is believed that the ancient Britons were enthusiastic bee-keepers, and one of the early names given to Britain was The Honey Isle of Beli. The Roman historian, Plutarch, asserted that the Britons only began to grow old when a hundred and twenty years of age, and attributed this to the amount of honey they consumed.

The famous Anglo Saxon mead was made by fermenting the liquor obtained by boiling in water combs from which the honey had been drained. One ounce of hops was then added to each gallon of this and some brandy, and the resulting liquid was the potent sack-mead.

In ancient Egypt it was valued as an embalming material, and even to-day those qualities are exploited. When eggs or seeds have to travel for a great distance over a lengthy period they are sometimes packed in honey.

In India a mixture of honey and milk, or equal parts of curds and clarified butter, is the usual offering made to a bridegroom on his arrival at the door of the bride's father. One of the purification ceremonies of the Hindus consists of placing a little honey in the mouth of a new-born baby.

Honey should not be clear like syrup, for that means the pollen has been strained out of it, and it is the pollen that provides the Vitamin C, a vital ingredient.

And don't throw your jar of honey away if it candies or crystallizes. Only ripe honey will candy, and it can easily be liquefied again if you like it that way by standing the jar in hot water.

FAIR QUESTION

In Texas, they tell a story of the days when the redoubtable Ma Ferguson first tossed her sombrero into the political arena. She came back from a succession of stump-speeches all over the state, and reported happily, "Looks like I'm going to sweep Texas." Pa Ferguson took the pipe out of his "How about starting with this living room?"

LOGY, LISTLESS, OUT OF LOVE WITH LIFE?

Then wake up your liver bile... jump out of bed earlier to go... Life not worth living? It may be the liver! It's a fact! If your liver bile is not flowing freely your liver is not doing its job... you have a clogged liver... you are listless and all the fun and sports go out of life. That's where you need aid, gentle Carotene Little Liver Pills. You see Carotene helps stimulate your liver bile and once again it is pouring out at a rate of up to two pints a day into your digestive tract. This should be your right up, make you feel that happy days are here again. So don't stay sick, get Carotene Little Liver Pills. Always have them on hand. Only the best from any druggist.

MISS ERMA BURRIS AWARDED BURSARY

Miss Erma Burris has received word that she has been awarded a Type A Dominion-Provincial Bursary in the amount of $250.00 to continue her studies at a Provincial Normal School. This bursary is granted on the basis of a student's standing throughout his or her High School course and, in particular, on the results obtained in the Upper School Departmental examinations held in June. Erma has led her class with the highest average marks each year during her Public and High School courses and at the same time has participated in various extra-curricular activities. She has given freely of her time and talents in order to promote the social, literary and musical entertainment of the school. Besides, in the June examinations she was successful in all of the ten subjects which she wrote, winning four first class and four second class honours. Congratulations and best wishes for a successful year at Peterborough Normal School are extended to her.

MADOC BRASS BAND IS NOW ORGANIZED

At the regular weekly practise on Tuesday night, September 23rd, at the high school, the Band, with an attendance of 15 players, was officially organized.

Bill Aylsworth was installed as conductor and Bob Wigle as assistant conductor.

An executive was also formed with Harold Brintnell as president; Grant Brett, as Secretary-Treasurer and three other bandmen, Gerald Snider, Frank Szumigaj and Bob Aylsworth, as members of the executive.

Following the practise which was attentive and also indicated the potential of the Band, the executive committee discussed several matters, one of which was the holding of a tag day to secure funds to help the Band in its initial stages.

All citizens are asked to watch this paper for an announcement in this regard soon. The Band is growing and will prove itself worthy of support.

TIMMINS, ONT.—"Who Called It 'The Frozen North?'"—To most of us Timmins seems pretty far north, but they grow fine grain up there as you can plainly see.

BEAVERTON, ONT.—"Wi' a Hundred Pipers"—well, not quite a hundred, but even half a dozen pipers will make enough noise—we mean music—to satisfy most folks.

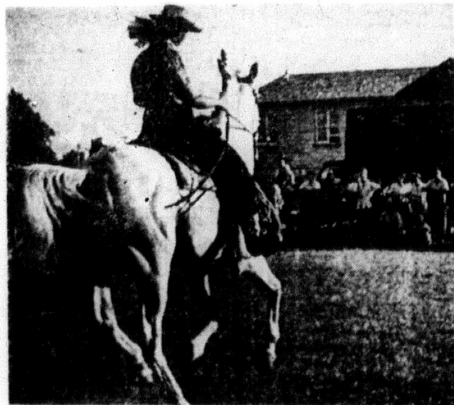

COOKSVILLE, ONT. — Just Nice "Clean" Fun — Pie eating contests are enjoyed by spectators and participants—not so much by the mothers who have to clean up afterwards.

NEW HAMBURG, ONT.—"It's a Big, Big World"—It was a case of either sacrificing part of the young lady, or part of the squash—and although the latter was a prize winner, you can see where our preference lies.

PETERBORO, ONT.—"Mary Had a Little"—Only, in this case, the young lady happens to be—not Mary—but Linda Russell, aged four, and the lam b isn't so very little either.

COOKSVILLE, ONT. — "Oh Give Me a Home" — Cooksville isn't situated exactly in those "wide open spaces"—but they do thing Western style now and then for all that.

Your Skeleton Tells Everything

Given the skeleton of a human being scientists can quickly tell its sex, race, age, and height from an examination of the skull and main limb bones. They can frequently discover what disease the person suffered from during life, and sometimes even the cause of death.

Years of burial do not hamper their analysis, for bones are amongst the most durable objects on earth.

There are over two hundred in the human body, from the large femur in the leg to the tiny stirrup bone in the ear. But scientists do not need the two hundred in their investigations.

From the skull alone they can usually tell the sex. The capacity of the female skull is two hundred cubic centimetres, less than the male, while the brow ridges are less prominent.

Racial characteristics show clearly in a skull. The nasal structure in a white person's skeleton, for instance, is more highly developed than in the negro.

Disappeared

The age of any skull is disclosed by the sutures which hold it together. After twenty-one these sutures or divisions disappear, as the bones of the skull knit together.

This fusing is universal. The three on top of the head start to link at twenty-two, twenty-four and twenty-six years. At thirty-five, forty-two and forty-seven they have disappeared, entirely.

Information based on scientific facts like these has been accepted in the courts. In Oklahoma some years ago oil was found on a tract of land which was registered in the name of an Indian youth who had disappeared when he was eighteen.

The father insisted that, as the boy had been killed in Arkansas while riding on a freight train, he was sole claimant to the royalties, a claim which was contested because of lack of proof of the boy's death.

The court ordered the exhumation of the body in Arkansas, and scientists said that the skeleton was that of an Indian youth, eighteen or nineteen years of age, five feet seven inches in height.

Proof of Death

This and other information corresponded closely with the record of the missing boy, and the court accepted it as proof of death.

Avoid Facial Wrinkles With Foot-ease Exercises

BY EDNA MILES

YOUR feet are your surest method of getting from one place to another. All day long, they take you shopping, walking, move you quickly about on your household duties, then sometimes take you dancing in the evening. In return, you should give them the utmost consideration and care.

When your feet hurt or ache, your face quickly reflects the pain. To a dancer like Allyn McLerie, now appearing in the Broadway musical, "Desert Song," tired lines and sagging facial muscles would be disastrous. Here, then, are her expert tips on keeping in good shape by exercise.

To strengthen her arches, she likes to spread a towel on the floor, sprinkle it with marbles and then attempt to pick up the marbles with her toes. Practice makes perfect and you'll get better as you go along. You will also acquire stronger arches, the better to support you, as you acquire skill at the game.

A second important exercise from Allyn McLerie's beauty notebook is good for toes, arches and for toning up leg muscles as well. To do it, alternately stand on your tiptoes on two piled up telephone books, then slide back on your heels. Do this for 20 counts each day.

When you take your nightly bath, brush your feet briskly. That's an aid to circulation. Massage your feet with oil or cream several times a week. You'll find a mentholated cream is soothing to aching feet.

Be sure that your stockings fit properly and that they allow enough room for your toes to wiggle easily. It's preventive care such as this that will keep away severe foot aches and pains that women frequently develop in their middle years.

Graceful actress-dancer Allyn McLerie demonstrates her favor—→ to arch-strengthening exercise. Scattering marbles on a towel, then relieving them with her toes tones up foot muscles, makes them ache-free and comfortable even after her many dance routines in Broadway musicals.

A single leg bone is enough to find the height of a skeleton, the data being based on a special formula.

When the scientists have a complete skeleton they can almost write a life history. A skeleton found in a well was believed to be the remains of a Marine, John Ellison.

Anthropologists judged the skeleton to be that of a left-handed man of military bearing. Giving their estimation of his age and height, they also reported that he had suffered from pyorrhea.

The left-handedness stemmed from the left humerus (a bone in the upper arm) being heavier than the right. The erect spinal column indicated a military career, while pyorrhea was obvious in the dentures.

Sex was based on the skull but confirmed by the pelvis, age from the sutures, and height from the femur bone. Ellison had been murdered, but after identification his killer was found.

Fortune for a Watch

Four years ago, M. Dargier de Saint Vaulry, a French fuse expert, tired of winding his wrist-watch every day. Applying his knowledge of electronics to the watchmaker's craft, he decided that a new motive power could be substituted for the old-fashioned mainspring.

Impressed by his idea, a French firm of watchmakers placed their resources at his disposal. In secrecy Saint Vaulry and the firm's technicians went to work.

As the months went by the piles of calculations grew. Then at last a prototype machine began to take place on the benches behind the locked doors of the laboratory. But its component parts were on such a minute scale that each had to be fashioned under a powerful magnifying glass.

Eventually they were assembled, and the first electronic watch was ready for testing. It had cost $300,000.

Recently exhibited in London, the new timepiece, in appearance just another wristlet watch, is powered by the world's smallest electronic generating set. The generator itself is tinier than a piece of confetti, while the motor is no bigger than the finger-nail of a new-born baby.

Runs For a Year

Its winding coils of insulated wire, one-sixth the thickness of a human hair, measure 10,000 feet! Current equivalent to one seven-millionth of one horsepower is sufficient.

Replacing the conventional mainspring, this Lilliputian power station will keep a watch running for a year. No winding is necessary, and accurate timekeeping is assured. Tests applied in France's National Observatory of Chronometry have proved its margin of error over a period of months to be less than one second.

When the generator is exhausted, it can easily be removed and a new one fitted by any qualified watchmaker.

Costing something like $20,000 to manufacture at present, the new electronic watch is to go into quantity production as soon as factories have been tooled up. When it reaches the market around 1954 M. Saint Vaulry's non-stop timekeeper may sell at a price no higher than that of any good quality watch.

ONE-AND-ONLY JOE

Joe Frisco, the stuttering comedian, is an unending source of stories for the hard-pressed columnists. One of the latest chronicles the touch he made from Charlie Farrell, the ex-movie star and present hotel magnate in Palm Springs. "It's only a hundred d-dollars," pleaded Frisco. "I need it for a new set of teeth the dentist is making f-f-for me." Farrell gave him the century note, but three days later Frisco was back asking for more. "What did you do with the hundred I gave you Tuesday?" asked Farrell suspiciously. "I had b-b-bad luck, Charlie," confessed Frisco. "My t-t-teeth finished seventh!"

Another Frisco story had him lost in the fog while driving his roadster from Palm Springs to San Bernardino. There was a car ahead of him picking its way through the enshrouding mist, and Frisco decided to follow closely behind it. This labor-saving device worked fine until the car that was guiding him stopped short—and Frisco's runabout smashed into its rear bumper.

The excited comedian jumped to the ground and hollered, "Why don't you a-a-stick your hand out when you c-c-come to a stop?" A voice hollered back, "Why should I—in my own garage?"

THE FARM FRONT

Great interest has been shown by potato growers in a recent press release about the possibility of using zinc sulphate and other zinc salts to increase potato yields. Perhaps more was read into the release than was intended, for the work on which it was based is still experimental. It is not recommended at present that growers use zinc sulphate as a seed treatment, or as a supplementary fertilizer.

In reporting more fully on the work being done at the Charlotte-town Experimental Station, L. C. Callbeck, says that the studies developed as an interesting off-shoot in testing new potato fungicides. It had been observed, for example, that one organic fungicide, excellent for controlling fungus diseases on certain vegetables, seriously depressed the yield of potatoes. On the other hand it is frequently reported that zinc-containing fungicides encourage increases in potato yields and observations indicated that there may be some justification for these claims. The increase—if it is assumed that there is an increase, may be induced from one of the following: (a) zinc-containing fungicides are less phytotoxic (less poisonous to plants); (b) the zinc in the fungicide stimulates growth or satisfies a minor element deficiency; (c) a combination of both factors.

At present zinc is the only metal other than copper that has found its way into Prince Edward Island's commercial plantings, reaching them chiefly in the form of zinc sulphate. For this reason the element zinc has been given priority in this new phase of fungicide research.

Tests have been conducted for two years and although small increases in yields have resulted from treating the seed pieces in zinc sulphate solutions, from incorporating zinc sulphate in the soil, and from including zinc sulphate in the copper spray mixture, no real conclusions may be drawn from the results of these experiments. The tests were conducted in the Laboratory plot area near Charlottetown and it is conceivable that the results might be quite different if the tests were carried out on other soils. Tests in other areas have been set out this season.

In conclusion, Mr. Callbeck emphasizes that these studies are still in the early stage of experimentation; that considerable research will have to be done before definite conclusions can be reached; and that it is not recommended that potato growers use zinc sulphate as a seed treatment, or as a supplementary fertilizer. Rather, he suggests they should "wait and see."

The decline in the sheep population of Canada during the last three years has become less marked indicating a halt in the reduction of flocks in the near future. However, the building up of flocks will likely lag behind the building up of beef cattle herds which is already under way, so that prospects for lamb prices relative to beef prices appear favourable for the next few years.

Per capita consumption of lamb and mutton in Canada has dropped very appreciably since pre-war years, but due to the increasing human population, total civilian domestic consumption has not decreased as rapidly as per capita consumption. In 1951 total civilian domestic consumption exceeded the estimated total weight of sheep and lambs slaughtered in Canada for the first time since 1939, and Canada had a deficit of some 305,000 pounds of mutton and lamb. It appears likely, even if the pre-war per capita consumption level is not regained, that there will probably be a good domestic market for a large proportion of the lamb and mutton that is likely to be produced in the next few years.

Farm income from the sale of wool in Canada has usually been of secondary importance to income from the sale of sheep and lambs for meat. Wool from western range sheep is usually of finer quality than that from sheep raised in the East, and farm income from wool production in the West constitutes a larger percentage of total farm income from sheep and lamb operations than it does in the East. In the ten years 1941 to 1950, income from the sale of shorn wool in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes averaged 16.7 per cent of the total farm income from the sheep and lamb industry in that region. The comparable figure for the Prairies and British Columbia is 21.9 per cent. Thus although sheep are raised primarily for meat, especially in Eastern Canada, farm income from the sale of wool constitutes a valuable addition to the total.

The sheep industry in Canada has been faced with serious problems, some of them problems of production, others problems of the reduction of the Canadian sheep population to a very low level. But there are indications that the reduction in sheep numbers may be coming to a halt, and that prospects for lamb prices in the next few years may be reasonably good.

David's Religious Contribution
2 Samuel 7:18-19, 25-29; 23:1-4

Memory Selection: Serve the Lord with gladness; come before his presence with singing. Psalm 100:2

No man has contributed so valuably to the world of poetry and song as David. Though nearly thirty centuries have gone David's psalms are sung the world around. He wrote in varied circumstances and moods. He wrote when fleeing from mad King Saul, when smitten by conscience for his own sin, and when in a state of rejoicing. In all his ways he sensed that God was overshadowing his life. His theme was always the Eternal God. If he climbed into heaven, there was God. If he dug down to hell, God was there, too. There wasn't room for him to hide from the Lord in the world, or in any world. The stars weren't just stars to him—they were God's lamps. The hills weren't just hills—they were God's footstools. If he saw the deer pant for water in the desert, that was how his heart panted for God. He did not confuse God with nature but he saw God everywhere. Nature was his handiwork.

David wanted to build a temple. When this privilege was denied him he took the disappointment with great grace. Of course he should have, for at the same time he was assured of a far greater honour. Of his seed there would come one, the throne of whose kingdom would be established forever. Yes, Jesus was of the seed of David. Today He reigns in millions of lives. The great climax of His triumph is yet to come.

The sick enjoy the psalms. They are truth in music. They echo the needs of the soul and portray the God who can abundantly satisfy who played his harp before the king came to well deserve the name, the Sweet Psalmist of Israel.

Her Grievance — Madge—"Your mother wouldn't like it if she saw you in that skimpy bathing suit." Marge—"Wouldn't like it! She'd be furious! It's her suit!"

"If it's all the same to you, Davenport, I'd like you to break them like all the other boys!"

Nothing like a good chocolate cake to make the family happy. When made with economical, non-fat dry milk, it carries first-class nutrition at a lower price. When covered with coffee frosting, your cake will have even further appeal.

Nonfat dry milk, which is milk with only the fat and water removed, is an excellent source of protein, calcium, riboflavin and lactose. A one-pound package yields five quarts of nonfat milk at a very economical price. It will keep almost indefinitely in a cool, dry shelf if the package is closed carefully after each using.

Coffee and cake make a delicious snack-time combination especially when the rich, dark coffee flavor is repeated in smooth cake frosting. Serve this mouth-watering ensemble to your guests dropping in on a Sunday afternoon. Better yet, whip up this delicious icing and surprise friends with a coffee-iced cake and hot coffee after an evening at bridge or the theatre.

CHOCOLATE CAKE

(Makes two 8 x 1½ layers)
½ cup sifted flour
½ cup non-fat dry milk
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ cup cocoa
½ cup shortening
1 cup sugar

1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 cup water

Sift together flour, nonfat dry milk, salt, baking soda and cocoa. Cream shortening; gradually add sugar and cream until light and fluffy. Add vanilla and eggs; beat until well blended. Combine vinegar and water, stirring only enough after each addition to blend well. Grease and line with waxed paper, two 8 x 1½-inch layer pans. Pour mixture into pans. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 30 minutes until cake springs back when lightly pressed with finger. Remove layers from oven; allow to cool in pans 5 minutes. Turn onto cooling rack.

COFFEE FROSTING

¼ non-fat dry milk
2½ cups sifted confectioners sugar
1 tablespoon instant coffee
½ cup butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 to 2 tablespoons water

Sift together nonfat dry milk powder, sugar and coffee. Cream butter. Gradually beat in half of dry ingredients. Stir in vanilla and 1 tablespoon water. Stir in remaining dry ingredients. Add remaining water if needed to give a good spreading consistency. Beat until fluffy.

MADOC W. I.

The September meeting of Madoc W. I. was held in the auditorium of Madoc High School on Friday evening with a fair attendance.

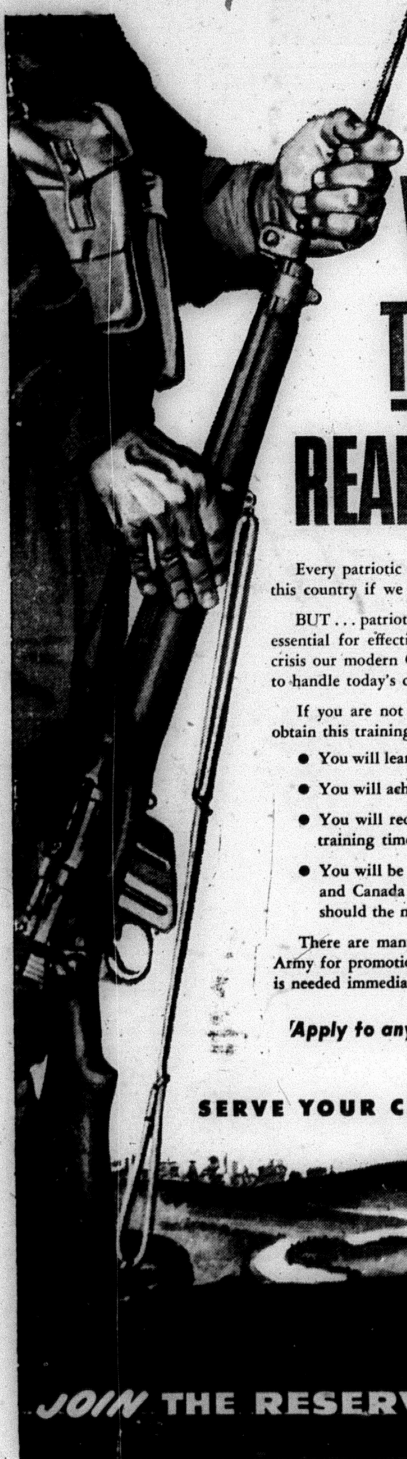

The guest speaker was Miss Marion Mutton, of Peterboro, a former member of the Madoc Public School staff, who showed films which were taken during her year as exchange teacher in England. Films of Germany were also shown. She was introduced by Mrs. Albert Empey and thanked by Mrs. P. H. Naylor.

Mr. Wm. Rothwell operated the film projector.

The Junior Choir of Trinity United Church, under the direction of Miss Olga Wurm, sang two numbers, "Danny Boy" and "Vesper Hymn". Mr. Wm Aylesworth spoke in the interests of the Madoc Band which is being organized.

The National Anthem closed the meeting.

ONCE BURNED—

* You cannot make any move toward encouraging this man without giving that impression. He is still married. He is no more free to date girls than he was before his divorce was started. He hasn't got it yet, you know.

* One would assume that any intelligent girl, being once deceived had had enough. To pose as a single man is about the lowest trick the married males can play. If he wasn't true to his wife, why do you think he would be loyal to you? How can you consider marrying such a cad? He never took you seriously, you know.

* Your good name is your most precious possession. Once gossip starts, it takes time to die down. How long this story of your chasing him last will depend upon your own conduct. Be more discreet than ever. Date only nice boys whom your parents know and can trust. Stay away from places this married man frequents, and if you happen to see him, keep on walking.

* If and when he gets free, he may look up—but you cannot count on it. If he should, don't think of seeing him even once; he will know why, and respect you for it. And when you must think of him, think of him as still married. That will help you get over it.

A young girl cannot be too careful about the company she keeps. Date only such boys as are introduced by people your family trust; that will help keep you out of trouble. And if you face any problem, tell Anne Hirst about it. Write her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ont.

Live On Sea-Water

The idea has existed—not unnaturally, for thousands have died of thirst at sea—that sea-water is poisonous and that man cannot exist on it. But now our ideas are being turned upside down by Dr. Alain Bombard, who intends crossing the Atlantic in a rubber dinghy. He will live on fish and sea-water, for he maintains that "anyone can live on sea-water, provided he drinks it slowly and takes not more than a pint a day."

This idea is not entirely new, for in 1871 a number of Frenchmen at the Academy of Sciences stated that sea-water had tonic qualities when taken internally, and that if a little sugar were added the taste would not be disagreeable. They added that appetizing bread could be made with flour mixed with sea-water, for when baked the salt flavour vanished.

In Britain, too, Richard Russel, M.D., placed on the market a translation of "A Dissertation on the Use of Sea-Water In Diseases of the Glands, particularly the Scurvy, Jaundice, King's Evil, Leprosy and Glandular Consumption." And as recently as 1938 a German weekly journal advertised "sea and meadow-spring water in the proportion of 1 to 9 as a health drink for alimentary troubles."

Hot Music Box—This electrically heated clothes dryer gives with a wail when wet wash is dry, thanks to inventiveness of William A. Wasemann. The 30-year-old laundry-equipment creator rigged up the device that plays "How Dry I Am" at the end of each drying cycle. Wasemann earned his mechanical-engineering master's degree with a thesis on harmonics of vibrating strings.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

by Geraldine D. Clarke

For the first time in—I don't know how many years—I did not put in an appearance at the Canadian National Exhibition. Daughter phoned that she had grandstand tickets for us for the last night's performance, and that Bob was on his way home to pick us up. Even so I could not see my way clear to going—I was still trying to catch up after my week in Ottawa. But we did talk Partner into going—and my staying at home made it easier for him to get away—the baling machine was here and we were expecting a man to pick up a calf—the same little calf we had such trouble in finding a week ago.

It is unusual for me to be on the farm alone, and when I am there seem to be so many noises—noises that I would never notice if Partner were here. Saturday night Tippy barked about every ten minutes as if someone was around. And the cows bawled . . . until I wondered if any of them had knocked down a fence. Only a prowl around the yard with that flashlight could satisfy me on that score. Then came a rattling noise in the house like the chains of Marley's ghost. It turned out to be coal slithering down from the top of the pile. But what a racket! I wonder why houses creak at night—and why do mice choose a time when one is alone for chewing out a new hole. Not that I am nervous about such things but any slight, persistent noise is irritating and distracting. However, I managed to bake a cake and a couple of pies in spite of interruptions.

My menfolk returned from the Ex. all right. Partner said he enjoyed the show—all except the fireworks which he thought were very poor—that he had seen better displays as a boy. And speaking of the Ex. I heard a bit of criticism while I was away which startled me considerably. A young ex-G.I. happened to call one night where I was visiting and I asked him what he thought of the C.N.E. This was his first answer—"I don't think much of it at all—we have a much better Midway at the Chicago Fair!"

"Maybe so," I answered, but the Midway isn't the whole Exhibition, you know."

"Well, what else is there to see?" he asked. I was so taken aback that I did not even bother to answer. What was the good of explaining to anyone who measured an exhibition by the size of its midway?

Apparently the weatherman has been waiting for the Ex. to end before bringing us our first taste of fall weather. The last two nights have been decidedly chilly—in fact just a little while ago I lit a fire in the livingroom. It looks so cheery and comfortable . . . gay little tongues of flame shooting upwards from around the chunks of wood in the open grate. Most people like a fire on the open hearth—it is one of the compensations of early fall. One . . . what are the others?

Well, perhaps I am wrong but I think fall has many compensations. It is a satisfying period. Satisfying because, spring and summer work has culminated—more or less—in complete preparations for winter. Hay for winter-feeding the cattle is stowed away in the barn; wheat and spring corn harvested; the worries of the growing season behind us—all helping to give us a sense of achievement. And then with fall comes a more settled working period. Schools are open once again, and no more do we see business notices—"We are closed for one week to give our staff its summer vacation." Of course we don't begrudge people their holidays but so often we forget and it nearly always happens that we need to do business with whatever store or office has its staff on vacation. But after the end of August, entire business places do not close. That would be a good time for farmers to take a holiday—if the cows and poultry would just stop producing for a week! Imagine Mrs. Housewife phoning the dairy some morning asking why no milk had been left. And then imagine her reaction if she should be told—"Oh, there won't be any milk deliveries this week—the farm people are on vacation!" Fantastic, yes, but it would be no more inconvenient to the housewife than stores closing is to the farmer.

Of course we know so much is taken for granted these days through lack of understanding. For instance a recent editorial in a local paper raised our eyebrows considerably. It was on the subject of mail delivery and ended thus—"Only city and rural dwellers enjoy (mail) delivery to their homes." City, yes—rural, no. Rural mail is delivered to roadside mailboxes—not to the homes. People living in cross-roads often have to walk or drive half a mile to their mailboxes. Even for those on a highway there is often a long lane between their home and the mail. In summertime going down for the mail can be good exercise for the less active members of the family. But in wintertime, fighting one's way through a snow-filled lane, against a biting wind, is something to remember. More than one person has suffered a heart attack through going for the mail daily delivered to their mailbox. We cannot yet be included in the same category as city dwellers whose mail is delivered to their doors. No, sir—not by a long way!

MISSING!

Publisher Alfred Knopf tried out a new secretary the other day. She was mighty pretty too. Mr. Knopf tightened his orange cravat, flicked a grain of dust off his magenta trousers and dictated a seven-page letter to Author Thomas Mann. When he finished an hour later, he found the big beautiful blue eyes of the new secretary fixed on his. "I hope you'll excuse me, Mr. Knopf," she told him, "but I didn't quite get what you said between 'Mr. dear Thomas' and 'as ever yours.'"

Men sure go for a MAGIC cake

COCONUT FUDGE CHIFFON CAKE

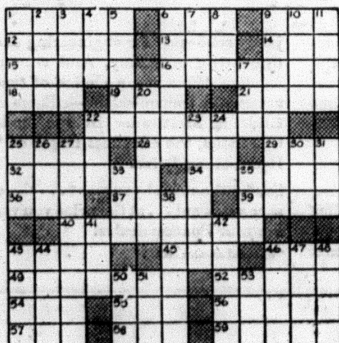

Mix and sift into a bowl, 1 c. plus 2 tbs. once-sifted cake flour, 1½ tsp. Magic Baking Powder, ¼ tsp. salt, ¼ c. fine granulated sugar; mix in ¼ c. desiccated coconut. Make a well in the dry ingredients and add in the order given (do not stir mixture), ¼ c. corn (salad) oil, 2 unbeaten egg yolks, ¼ c. plus 2 tbs. water, 1 tsp. vanilla, 2½ ounces unsweetened chocolate, melted and cooled. Stir the liquids to intermingle, then stir in the dry ingredients beat until batter is smooth. Measure into a large bowl ¼ c. egg whites (at room temperature) and sprinkle with ¼ tsp. cream of tartar; beat until the egg whites are very very stiff—much stiffer than for meringues, angel cakes, etc. Add flour mixture, about a quarter at a time, and fold after each addition until batter and egg whites are thoroughly combined. Turn batter into an ungreased 8" angel cake pan; bake in a rather slow oven, 325°, about 1 hour. Immediately cake comes from oven, invert pan and suspend cake until cold.

MEN WHO THINK OF TOMORROW PRACTISE MODERATION TODAY

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

• This one didn't appear in the points record, but I happen to think that the real Olympic champions are the Finnish nation, all 4,000,000 of this peace-loving and sports-worshipping little country's population.

In 1940 the Finns had, with great pride, accepted the honor of being host to the Olympic scheduled for that time and planned accordingly. But then came the Russian invasion and World War II, resulting in cancellation of the contests and tremendous financial losses. After hostilities had ceased, Finland was unable to accommodate the 1948 games, which took place in England.

The work and outlay has been tremendous. For instance the Olympic Stadium, built at enormous cost, had accommodation for 70,000 spectators. Nearby was built another stadium with a heated outdoor swimming pool for practice purposes. A new pool, and begun in 1939, was blasted out of bedrock in a pine forest, and from sheer wilderness became the scene of aquatic contests with facilities to seat 10,000 onlookers. These are only a few examples of the modern playing fields and arenas sports-minded Finland built for the various matches. They spared nothing to achieve perfection for what proved to be the most sensational of all Games.

With the thousands of visitors, Finland faced a real housing problem. But Helsinki solved this poser. The Olympic Village for men consisted of fourteen units patterned after modern apartment houses. The main section contained 1,181 rooms and two others had 212 and 277 compartments. This was for the athletes. And every private home was hospitable thrown open to non-competing visitors.

Food presented another problem. Arrangements were made to increase imports from neighboring countries. Dutch producers and businessmen have offered fifty tons of fresh fruit for contestants, and Finnish vessels transported the fruit from the Netherlands. And the food in general everybody agrees, was wonderful.

There were hundreds of guides and interpreters to accommodate visitors. The press relations were perfect. There wasn't a flaw in the arrangements for the greatest of all Olympics, staged by the smallest nation which has in years handled this mighty chore. Finland deserves a wreath of wild olives, or a gold medal, or whatever it is Olympic champions receive.

Mice That Sing

Yorkshire housewives have been complaining about a plague of "field mice" and "singing mice," but naturalists say the common mouse, known scientifically as the "Mus musculus," is to blame. It is distinguished from "field mice," or voles, by possessing rooted teeth with which it can chew, and by its long scaly tail. It is about 3½ inches in length, and its tail measures 3¼ inches.

And sometimes it does sing! Many people have heard "singing mice," which emit a song rather like that of a subdued canary. Their song has also been compared with running water.

Various explanations have been suggested for this singing. Some authorities say it is merely the result of the mouse's breathing apparatus being obstructed by bronchitis, or a growth pressing on the throat and breathing tubes.

Others point to the proved fact that both rats and mice are attracted by music, and that the story of the Pied Piper of Hamelin is certainly not pure fiction, for rodents have been known to come out of their holes quite fearlessly to listen to music.

One naturalist who kept both mice and canaries observed that the youngest of the rodents tried to imitate the birds' song.

The common mouse is often mistaken for the field mouse, for it is not confined to houses alone, but frequents barns, outhouses, and especially the space between corn-stalks.

It is not as prolific as the long-tailed field mouse, which some naturalists say is the commonest wild animal in this country.

Two female field mice kept in captivity began to breed at five and a half months old, and brought about between them 36 young ones in a few weeks.

The field mouse is slightly larger than the common mouse, is reddish-brown above and white underneath, with very long white hind feet.

It lives in thickets, fields and gardens, and since it is almost entirely a vegetable feeder, it does great damage.

During the winter months it lives in a burrow, near which it buries large stores of grain, peas, beans, seeds, so that the unfortunate farmer or gardener has to support it from one year's end to another.

Its distant cousin is the fluffy, round-eyed ball known as the harvest mouse, which loves the sunshine, and is so light that he can up a cornstalk and perch on top. He builds his nest among the corn-stalks about a foot above the ground, and about half the size of a tennis ball.

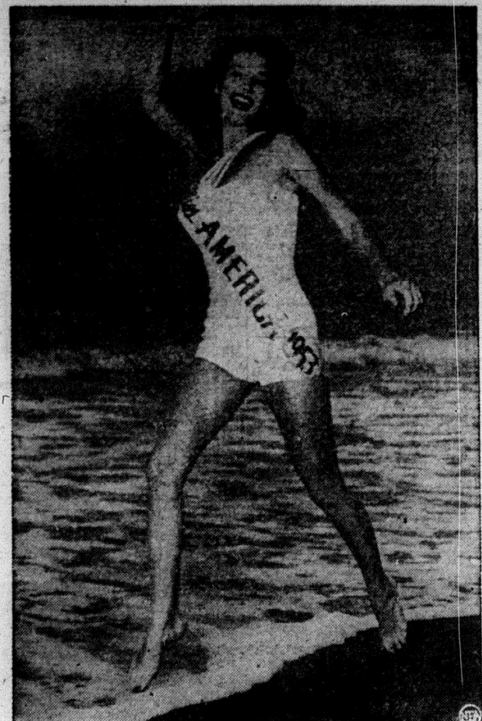

His staple food is grain, but in spite of his "wee tim'rous beastie" look (which was how the Scottish bard, Robert Burns, described him), he is a savage cannibal when given half a chance. A fight between two harvest mice means a fight to the death, and a horrible orgy of feasting on the part of the victor.

"He just keeps on going out and yelling for help. He must be tired after the long season."

Plane With A Brain — Streaking past its predecessor, the F-80 Shooting Star, is the F-94C Starfire in foreground. Equipped with 1200 pounds of electronic apparatus, the new plane is able to locate the enemy, think out a course, automatically guide itself, aim its 24 rockets and attack. Capable of flying 600 miles per hour, the Starfire carries a three-man crew.

Beauty Queen Of '53—Neva Jane Langley, 19-year-old talented lovely who won the 1953 "Miss America" contest romps on the beach after winning the coveted beauty title. The shapely lass from Florida, who entered the national pageant as "Miss Georgia," won a $5,000 scholarship, $4,000 in cash, and an automobile.

Wolves That Solved A Water Shortage

One of the oldest customs is that of tipping. The surreptitious passing of "thanks" from hand to hand is usually carried out with the neat efficiency of an expert sleight-of-hand conjuror.

The practice is invariably hush-hush; the giver saying nothing, his silence is respected and a whispered word of thanks or perhaps a gesture by way of acknowledgment is received. The exchange over, no one else was interested or knew anything of the transaction.

The procedure, varies in Persia, and a tip, or present, for services rendered is relayed to all and sundry; it enhances the character of the donor.

Freya Stark, in a new edition of her chronicle of rare and enthralling journeys in the less accessible regions of Persia, "The Valleys of the Assassins," relates an incident in which she was mildly taken to task for the unobtrusiveness of her tipping.

Gifts to the Arabs

After a stay in the village of Shurh Khan, Freya Stark decided to continue her journey. With the village a few hundred yards behind her, she noticed that something was weighing rather heavily on the mind of one of her native followers. He eventually came up to her and asked whether she'd given a present to the Arab's servant.

"Yes," she told him. "How was it that we did not see it given?" queried the man. Replied the donor: "It is our custom to give these gifts as quietly as possible."

Aziz admitted that it might be a good custom in her country, but not in his. He set about putting matters right. Hailing a passing hillman the two spent quite a while chatting earnestly and seriously together. Rejoining the waiting party, Aziz explained: "This man, will tell the Arab, and you will be fairly spoken of among them all."

At Aamut the traveller happened to hear the call of the cuckoo, and commented on the uselessness and wickedness of the bird, growing as it does in a strange nest. The man to whom she addressed her remarks didn't agree.

"Is that so?" said he. "If your eye is diseased and you smear ointment made from the cuckoo's eyes upon it, it will heal. Allah makes all things useful."

Castle Besieged

Visiting the remains of the Assassins Castle of Lamiar, Freya Stark records an interesting legend attached to the building. During earlier days, especially in times of siege, a difficulty confronting the defenders of the castle was the water supply. To help conserve the precious fluid, numerous cisterns had been cut into the stone. The other source of supply dropped from a rampart, via a covered river. This passage was called the Gurg-u-Mish, or Wolf-and-Ram. Apparently at one time the inhabitants of the castle were in dire need of water. By some means rams were herded into the tunnel with skins full of water tied underneath their bellies. Wolves were let in behind them. Terrified by the pursuing wolves, and with no escape from the narrow way, the flock rushed up the slope and provided the castle with water.

Weeping Bride
Pity the bride the author met at Garmrud. In one corner, apart from all the festivities and feasting, completely hidden under a pale blue veil, stood the bride. She remained motionless, hour after hour while guests streamed by, unable to sit because the chief guest requested her not to. Freya Clark, lifting the veil to greet her, was horrified to see large tears rolling down her painted cheeks. She was weeping with fright and fatigue—a veiled image at her own wedding feast.

The bride would not appear in public again for twenty-one days after the wedding. "The Valleys of the Assassins" is an absorbing book—a classic of travel.

TAKE NO CHANCES

Quentin Reynolds calls attention to the fact that Montgomery's campaign in the Near East has altered a centuries-old custom of the natives in those parts. "Since time immemorial," says Reynolds, "Arabian men rode majestically on the family donkey while their wives, laden down with all sorts of burdens, trudged patiently behind on foot. After 1942, however, all that was changed. The wife was emancipated. She now walks in front. There are many unexploded land mines."

WAIT YOUR TURN

Grover Whalen has revived the story of the fastidious diner who objected to the way his steak had been prepared and had it sent back to the kitchen. The waiter brought it back with a message that the chef considered the steak perfectly okay in every particular. "He does, does he?" bellowed the outraged diner. "You just march that steak back to the chef and tell him to ram it down his throat." Back came the waiter with the same old steak. "I'm very sorry, sir," he reported, "but there are two steaks and four lamb chops ahead of you."

IN MEMORIAM

ELLIS—In loving memory of a dear mother, Mrs. Letitia Ellis, who passed away September 24, 1949. Her weary hours and days of pain; Her troubled nights are past, And in our aching hearts we know She has found sweet rest at last. Ever remembered by her son, Goldie, Bertha and family.

IN MEMORIAM

MAYNARD—In loving memory of our dear son, Douglas, who passed away September 24th, 1950. Today recalls sad memories Of a dear son, gone to rest, And the ones who think of him today Are the ones who loved him best. Sadly missed by mother and dad.

IN MEMORIAM

PHILLIPS—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Samuel Phillips, who passed away September 25, 1951.

If we had all the world to give We'd give it, yes, and more, To hear his voice and see his smile, And greet him at the door. Sadly missed by wife and son, Ralph.

BIRTHS

ROLLINS — In Belleville General Hospital, on Tuesday, September 23, 1952, to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rollins, a daughter.

IN MEMORIAM

DOWNEY—In loving memory of our dear son, Wayne, who was taken away on September 24, 1948. Memories are treasures no one can steal. Death is a heartache nothing can heal. Some may forget you now that you're gone.

But we shall remember no matter how long.

Sadly missed by daddy, mommy, Clare and Elaine.

IN MEMORIAM

ROOT—In loving memory of a dear wife and mother who passed away September 27, 1948.

God knew that she was suffering. That the hills were hard to climb So He closed her weary eye lids, And whispered, "Peace be thine." Away in the beautiful hill of God By the valley of rest so fair, Some time, some day, we know not when We will meet our loved one there.

Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by her husband and family.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank my many friends for their remembrance, while I was in the hospital, and later while I was at Mrs. C. Bruyn's Nursing Home. The cards and fruit baskets and candles were greatly appreciated.

A special thanks goes to Mrs. Bruyns for her grand care and patience shown me. Mrs. Wm. Tate. Eldorado.
